Zanu (PF) won 57 of the 80 black seats in the new House of Assembly, enough for a comfortable absolute majority even when the 20 seats reserved for whites are taken into acrount. However, he told a press conference today that the new Government would be a patrioric Front government in which Mr. Nkomo's party would also take part. Mr. Nkomo won 20 seats, leaving only three for Biskop Abel Muzarewa's UANC. This Mugabe Nkomo partnership would amount to a revival of the old Patrioric Front alliance which fought the guerrille war against white rule and negotiared as a unit at Lan-

In a broadcast to the ustion tonight, Mr Mugabe said he hoped to establish a national front which, in the interests of establishs, would include representatives who were coopied from other communities. This powermount would solver in the Constitution and would uppoid fundamental rights and freedoms. Timetable for the future of Zimbabwe

No date has yet been set when Southern and Mr Mugabe has been sworn in as Prime Rhodesia will become the independent re-public of Zimbabwe although it is hoped the handover of power by Britain to the new government may take place before the end of this month.

The final date will depend on the speed with which Mr Robert Mugabe, the Prime Minister-designate, manages to form a govsomes, the Governor, and Mr Mugabe today. Lord Soames emphasized that Mr Mugabe should take his time in establishing what is expected to be a broadly-based government in which both Mr Josaua Nkomo's Patriotic Front and the White Rhodesian Front, both of which hold 20 seats, will be represented.

Mr Mugabe has already had preliminary talks with Mr Ian Smith and Mr Nkomo. This evening he had talks with his party's central committee about the shape of his new administration. He has not yet given indication how long consultations will last before he is in a position to form a government. Once a government has been announced Minister a number of other constitutional procedures have to be followed before independence day and the departure of the Governor.

First the Senate, comprising 40 senators, must be established. The Senate will consist of 10 senators elected by the 20 white Mem-bers of Parliament, 12 senators elected by the black Members of Parliament and 10 African chiefs. Five of whom will be elected by the Mashonaland Council of Chiefs and the other five by the Matabeleland Council of Chiefs. Another six senators will be appointed by the Governor.

Once these elections are completed the oper an Lower Houses zing together will elect a president. It is widely expected that Mr Nkomo will become the country's first president. Only then will there be a constitutional head of state to whom the Governor can surrender power.

The timing of these steps is uncertain, but two to three weeks is considered reasonable. Mr Nicholas Fenn, the Governor's spokes man, said he hoped to be back in Britain

Let's assume the year is now 1984.

Four years ago you bought a new Volvo 244DL. At the time it seemed a pretty good bet.

In terms of performance, space and economy there was little to choose between the Volvo and its rivals, give or take a few seconds, inches and mpg.

In terms of equipment the Volvo couldn't be faulted; headlampwash-wipers, a tachometer, a heated driver's seat and 4 inertia-reel seat belts all came as standard.

And the Volvo did cost substantially less.

Looking back to 1980, do you still believe you made the right choice?

Well, if all the surveys by motoring magazines and consumer organisations hold true, you will have no regrets.

Time and time again the Volvo has come out as having fewer breakdowns than the average car, fewer major faults and fewer days off the road.

Or to put it another way, less expense for the Volvo owner.

So even if Orwell's vision of 1984 has become fact, at least you'll have one thing to smile about.

Many a car begins to show its age after 4 or 5 years' hard use.

Yet at this point a Volvo isn't even approaching middle age, let alone retirement. Statistics compiled by the Swedish Government show that Volvos last longer than any other car tested, giving an average of 17-9 years's ervice before that final journey to the scrapyard.

Obviously we're not suggesting you keep your Volvo this length of time.

But we are pointing out that their reliability and durability is well-known amongst those looking for a second-hand car.

Consequently, used Volvos tend to fetch a very good price indeed.

And there's nothing like a big cheque to soften the blow of parting with a car that's given you so much faithful service over

Government offers £1m lifeline to tide over film finance body

Arts Reporter

A lifeline was held out by the Government to the ailing British film industry with the announcement yesteray that the National Film Finance Corporation will be able to borrow £im under government guaran-

Mr John Nott, Secretary of for Trade, said in a parliamentary reply that the concession would allow the corporation to remain in business until the introduction of legislation writing off debts of £13m.

The Films Bill, to be published next mouth, proposes that the corporation will for a limited period receive an annual subvention from the Eady levy, which is the proportion of the cinema admission price returned to the industry. To benefit from the levy film a has to be British and three quarters of the labour costs have to be paid to British staff.

The concession announced by Mr Nott is likely to alleviate the corporation's difficulties only partially. In its annual report yesterday, it contrasted the part-financing of 62 featurelength films 30 years ago with the four of last year.

"Unless the corporation has funds to enable it to contribute towards the making of at least 10 films a year, it will be difficult to play an effective role in improving the climate for the British cinema", the report said.

As a result of the new arrangements for restructuring its funding, however, the corporation would for the first time have an annual income enabling it to plan mora reversal of a sterilization operation.

Danielle Gamble is said to be the first baby born in England to a mother who had been sterilized by the clip operation.

Mrs Marilyn Gamble, aged 32, of Yatesbury Crescent, Strelley Estate, who already has three children, was sterilized in July, 1976. Nearly two years later she decided that she wanted a fourth child. In February, 1978, she underwent an operation to reverse the sterilization, believed to be the first in England.

It was carried out by the inventor of the clip, Dr Marcus Filshie, a consultant gynaecologist at Nottingham City Hospital.

Dr McCandlish, who was speaking at a press conference in London, said: "We have identified something like 500 individual outbreaks, which often involve more than one dog. Bird society buys the case for deleting the reference to how many councillors could get the payment.

He agreed that specifying the number would tend to set the pattern of the structure of an authority. He could not envisage a situation in which, for example, eight committee choirmen would be paid the new allowances and four would not. He persuaded the Opposition to withdraw an amendment suggesting that the regulations should specify the total amount an authority could spend in paying the new allowances.

Mr King promised that there would be further discussions with the local authority associations with a view to deleting the provision relating to numbers and retaining the provision

Mr Mugabe presents the face of moderation

Anyone listening to Mr Robert Mugabe, leader of Zanu (PF) and Prime Minister-Designate of Zinubabwe, when he addressed a press conference this morning after his party's landslide victory in the Southern Rhodesian election would have found it hard to believe that this was a man whose that this was a man whose name had struck so much fear and hatred into the hearts of the country's white community.

Sixting in the garden of his suburban Salisbury house sur-rounded by happy party offi-cials he spoke in soothing and moderate terms about the sort of society he wanted to see established in Zimbabwe.

"Our government will be fair and just and will ensure that the principles that we fought and died for are sacrosanct," he said.

Since his return to Rhodesia last month after almost five years in exile, Mr Mugabe has sought to project himself as a man of moderation. His party's manifesto was mored down and all references to radicalism and revolution were removed.

All this contrasts starkly with the image many white Rhodesians held of a man who was engaged in a revolutionary struggle in order to impose an authoritarian Marxist system on the country.

Whether Rhodesian whites have changed their opinions during the five weeks since his return remains to be seen. Some Mr Mugebe has for long been the enigma of the Rhodesian nationalist movement, partly because he spent so long either in detention or in exile. He has none of the fismboyance of

in Florida

The radio ennouncer sounded startled. "I don't believe it", he cried. "There's steam rising out of Biscayne Bay."

It was happening because the temperature in this tropical southern resort, which had never previously dropped below 40°F in March, was yesterday near freezing point. The sea was warmer, giving the effect of a hot bath in a cold bathroom.

It came as a dreadful shock to this city, whose weather is its livelihood. Although most of the nation had been in the grap of a deep freeze for nearly a week, in southern Florida anything under 60°F is viewed as cruel and unusual punishment. It is, therefore, not equipped to cope. Buildings, though superbly ekr conditioned, are often inadequately heeted. Indian villages - 3

Green revolution benefits only big landowners

From Richard Wigg in an Uttar Pradesh village

A record player often blares out Indian popular music evenings from the " big house ", proclaiming the landowner's family enjoys electricity. Except moonlight nights, everyone else is either in darkness or makes do with oil lanterns.

Electricity came to the big house thanks to the village's Harijans (formerly Untouch-ables) and the need of the Congress Party to secure their votes in the state elections. The elec-tricity arrived as promised by the victorious Congress can-didate, three incongruously tall, city-style concrete street lamp-osts set down the Harijans' mud osts set down the harjans must track—and the big house was fitted up as well. Since the Harijans were too poor to pay electricity bills, it was un-

Soon, however, the electricians came and dismantled the Harijans' street switch; it was turned off and on from the market town. Then as the bulbs market town. Then as the bulls were out the lights went off in the Harijans' own quarter. "So now it's only benefited them" a group of Harijan women, returning from fetching water, pitchers on their heads, shouted indignantly one marking before indignantly one morning before provided the hereditary head-the big house was stirring. The land reforms put through after independence left them with 60 acres irrigated in this village, divided among the family members to avoid the "ceiking" limit of a maximum of 18 acres. Actually the family own more than 100 acres in of 18 acres. Actually the family own more than 100 acres in other districts of this northern state, but land records are only kept village-wise in India and the state Revenue Department, like the electricity board, knows how to treat a former big landowning family.

Uttar Pradesh was one of the states where India's land reforms in the 1950s created most resistance from the old landed families. But hardly one per cent of India's total cultivated land has actually been redistributed to the landless during the past 25 years. As Medal was won by Janet and Allan Ahlberg for their rhyming picture book Each Peach Pear Plum (Kestrel, £2.95) and they celebrated the event by publishing a modest but informative work called The Little Worm Book (Granada, £1.25). Its 32 pages are replete with facts useful to worm-hunters ("try not to let them know you are coming") and to those are coming") and to those keeping worms as pets ("a converted glove makes a cosyworm home"), and there is an invaluable "Short History of the Worm" and a section on "Worms and their World", which includes a picture of the Highlands, on eight charges of rare Borneo Dog Worm in its kennel. An unusually well-researched contribution to modern biological studies for younger youth.

Mr Ahlberg also appears as the author of six little books in a series called "Happy Families" (Kestrel, £1.95 each; Putfin paperbacks, 60p each). These probably owe a debt to the efferwescent Dr Seuss, who pioneered the application of slapstick to the dowdy face of educational "readers", each book retailing a farcical event in the life of such characters as Mr Cosmo the Conjuror or Mrs Plug the Plumber. The Mrs Plug the Plumber. The comic overdrive is a bit wearing in the feebler narratives, like Miss Jump the Jockey, but Allan Ahlberg has a professional awareness of the parts of a story that can be left to the illustrator and he's got some apt cartooning from his collaborators: Andre Amstutz, Joe Wright and, inevitably, his wife Janet, in what prove to be the two best books: Mr Biff the Boxer and Mrs Wubble the Waitress. (Incidentally Dr Seuss himself appears again this season with Oh Say Can You Say?, a book of tongue You Say?, a book of tongue twisters, where the comedy is likewise laid on with a shovel—Collins, £1.75.)

The extravagance of Joan Aiken's imagination and her refusal to be solemn have established her as a consistently region. freshing, funny, unpretentious children's writer. Her move, with The Shadow Guests, into the sombre realms of " meaning. the sombre realms of meaning-ful fantasy seems to me to be a mistaken one. The lack of restraint, which manifests itself in Joan Aiken's gayer moods as exiberance, is here turned to melodrama; the unlikely situa-tions and personalities in which her mind revels seem failed attempts at realistic scene-set-ring and portraiture, rather than ring and portraiture, rather than her usual glorious caricatures.

The children at a Joan Alken co-ed boarding school in Oxford have no alternative but to speak like demented exiles from Grey-friers: "I bags the first bath." Don't be too long then, you stinker. That they do so here subverts the serious pur pose of the book beyond the point at which its central theme, the hero Cosmo's reconciliation to the deaths of his mother and brother, and the lifting of the family curse, can remain credible or interesting.

The story, in which four some-what lugubrious ghosts enable bereaved Cosmo to come to terms with his problems, lacks shape, and the language in which it is told seems tired and imprecise. Words and phrases recur to repetitive rather than emphatic effect; figures of speech (why should air travellers be "lemmings"?) are often clauser or input. clumsy or inapt.

Arabel and Mortimer, a reprint of three of Joan Aiken's Jackanory stories about Arabel Jones and her raucously acci-Jones and her raucously accident-prone raven Mortimer, is more welcome. Slight though they are, these tales, with their wonderfully elastic Quentin Blake illustrations, overflow with wit and invention. Plot and language share a wild, slapstick verve which enables the reader gleefully to submit to the stories' crazy logic. Arabel and Mortimer sparkles, and beside it The Shadow Guests seems it The Shadow Guests seems ponderous and lacklustre.

Russian Tragedy

The Tale of Prince Igor By Leonard Clark, illustrated by Charles Keeping (Dobson, 23.25)

The Tale of Prince Igor, an anonymous epic poem of the twelfth century, is Russia's earliest literary masterpiece, somewhat akin to a mixture of Beowulf and the legends of King Arthur. In surring, lyrical poetry it tells the story of the Prince's valiant and foolhardy campaign against the Polovisians—a plot of Christians against includes, Good against Evil, that was the inspiration of Borodin's opera. For all its many obscure passages, the 3,000 word poem is most been venture. There is also, from tifully told, with constant reference to the Russian countryside its trees and birds, all expressing compassion for notes on people and place names, and an illuminating in that period two constructs. in that period, two centuries after the Christianizing of Russia, that produced so many wonderful churches, icons and paintings.

Although numerous transla-tions of The Tale bave been made, Leonard Clark's new version is the first to attempt to provide a relatively simple English poem for young people of thirteen or fourteen. He has arrived at it by freely adapting various other translations, and one gets the impression that he has had some difficulty in finding a way through the complexities of the original. Furthermore, his rather prosy free verse has little kinship with the poetry of the Russian epic, although those unfamiliar with the story will catch some-thing of its spirit

Charles Keeping's fifteen stark, full-page drawings, that accompany the twenty-four pages of text, admirably capture the pain and fortinde, grief

Come Back Enid

Rlobber By Judy Blume (Heinemann, £3.75)

Last year British children saw the blossoming of Judy Blume. "A household name" they say she is in the United States, but we've not had much means for telling why here, epart from a couple of sighting shots from Gollancz—the latex love-story Forever . . . (1976), and Are You There, God? It's me, Margaret (1978), a book with the unwritten subtitle "because, Cod. Pro-God, I'm having my first period ". In 1979, however, no less than five more of Miss Blume's effusions arrived here: a couple of little story collecmons for younger readers (Bodley Head) a couple of stories about the hang-ups of adolescents (Heinemann), and a novel -Wifey-about the same hangups in more acute form transferred to later life (Macmillan). From such evidence, "house-hold " certainly seems to be a reasonable adjective to attach to Miss Blume as author. The only things that seem to interest her are domestic trivia, in the midst of which she places plastic cut-out figures with just enough foibles hung about them to persuade the reader that he or she is at one with the person in the book (" just what millions of modern young teenagers crave "gushes a rejuvenated English a rejuvenated English reviewer. Your parents may not understand you but Judy Blume does " remarks another.) The latest addition to this canon, Blubber, does nothing to reassure those of us who think otherwise that Miss Blume has got any nearer to finding out how to write a story, and its theme-that bitchiness will find a way merely offers her the opportunity to sketch a bery of characters who are rather more distanteful than usual. Quite frankly, if the reviewers are right and millions of readers really do crave pap on the lines of "The Mystery of the Vanish-ing Gro-Bra" or "Five Go Jacking Off Together" then the time has come to say "Come back, Enio, all is forgiven".

Geoffrey Hunt, of Melbourne,

Hunt has won this tournament for the past three years.

"I was very disappointed because my game has been picking

Hunt said: "I felt really good

The second game suggested that Hunt's superb affort in the first had left him in need of a breather: physically, emotionally or both. He made eight errors—which is a lot for him—and every one of them was on his usually sound backhand. On the other hand Jahan was unexpectedly hitting winners

Gray will plead for a place at Wembley

Andy Gray, Britain's costliest footballer, will plead with an FA disciplinary commission in Birmingham today to leave him free to play in the League Cup final.
The $1.5 million striker of Wolwerhampton Wanderers will ask the commission—West Bromwich Albion's Bert Millichip, Birmingham City's Jack Wiseman and a Chesbire county official Frank Foden—to take a lenient attitude towards his 20 secured disciplinary cowards his an executed disciplinary points. They can suspend him for up to three games, but even a one-game suspension could rule Gray out of the March 15 Wem-bley final against Nottingham

Wolverhampton's attempts to Wolverhampton's attempts to arrange a league game against Forest next Saturday have been blocked, and the only fixture they have pencilled in for next week is against Gray's former club, Aston Villa, on Monday, but Villa could be involved in an FA Cop replay against West Ham United.

Villa's FA Cup hopes were hit on Monday night when Alan Evans was sent off at Brighton. Evans, who had scored the goal in a 1—1 draw, automatically misses the draw, automatically misses me quarter-final, Trevor Ross and Ass Hardord of Everton, also appear with 20 points. Any suspension would rule them out of Saturday's FA Cup quarter-final against Ipswich nem out of Satinary Ipswich Town.

Everton have a poor disciplinary record this season; Kidd, King and Stanley have all been suspended. Lyons now has 20 points and kidd passed 30 by being booked against Liverpool last Samrday. Stanley, Barton, Nulty and Higgins are injured and would be anable to deputise for Hartford or Ross, but Megson, who missed the Merseyside derby, could fill one of the vacancies.

Mr Lee, who has Nulty out for the rest of the season with damsged ligaments, is set to plunge into the transfer market before the March 13 deadline.

Jimmy Bloomfield, the Orient manager, must wait until the sumser to find out whether he will be able to take up his new post as managing director of the second division club. Orient have rewarded Mr Bloomfield's services by setting up his promotion to the board of directors. But first the FA and Football League must amend the rules forbidding paid directors, which they will consider at their summer, ammai meetings. Van Gool signs: Roger van Gool, the Belgian international at their summer annual meetings.

Van Goof signs: Roger van Gool, the Belgian international winger from FC Cologne, completted his £250,000 transfer to Coventry City yesterday and then

Forest face dangerous goalscorer

Ey Norman Fox
Football Correspondent

All of Brian Clough's capacity for lifting the spirits, whether by scolding or cajolery, will be needed tonight (7.30) when at the City Ground Nortingham Forest defend their European Cup against Dynamo Berlin only five days after losing to the first division's weakest team, Bolton Wanderers.

There is also danger for Britain's other representatives in the quarter-final round of this competition, Celtic, who are at home in the first leg to Real Madrid, but Arsenal, England's only survivors in the Cup Winners' Cup, should not be under strain against Götte borg unless the Swedes are as defensively stubborn, and, frankly, boring as Malmö in last season's European Cup final with Forest.
Unusually there is no British team
Cup, thus endangering future parsicipation which will be on the basis of past success.

Celtic's tie has always seemed the most testing, but Forest's has not been made easier by fluctuating form. Mr Clough's reaction to ing form. Mr Clough's reaction to Saturday's defeat was itself more defeatist than, in retrospect, he probably intended. He said it was "a disaster; a terrible perform-ance". One comes to accept such statements as being planted for canny psychological reasons, but news from Germany that Dynamo had beaten Riesa 9—1 in a league game added a touch of gemine concern.

Dynamo, escond in the East German league, are not expected to be as impressively talented as some of the teams British clubs have met in Europe, yet their reputation is based on a well organized defence and hard work. They will be encouraged by the return, after a long absence, of Riediger, a particularly dangerous goalscorer. Bob Paisley, the Livernool manager, who has some exgoalstorer. Bob Paisley, the Liverpool manager, who has some experience in these matters, judges

Mr Clough said: "Stan has suffered a bit recently, when our results have wavered, but he is a skilful player and we bought him to create. He may not be built for in-fighting but he has a lot to offer and we will be looking to him to produce it to-morrow."

Mr Clough added: "I am not bothered about Dynamo's per-formances. The onus is on us and the match has got to be won here. I don't fancy going to Berlin with the tie still in the balance." The

One of the most interesting features of Real Madrid's visit to Scotland will be the appearance of the England international winger, the England international winger, Cumbridgem, who seems to be playing much more valuably for his new Spanish club than his form at Wembley would suggest. Shortly after returning after playing against the Republic of Ireland he was said to have performed extraordinarily well in Barcelona, and there is no doubting his wonterful ability, only his temperaderfol ability, only his tempera-ment. The Celtic full backs, McGrain and Smeddon, should be dramatic impression, which is much as one would expect at this time of the year when they have only recently ended their whiter hiberustion. But less season's achievements by Malmö indicated that if nothing else the Swedes had done a great deal of homework. Football League matches are seen on Swedish television and their coaches are frequent visitors. Brady, Rix and Sunderland, all players who should evercome close marking and he fitter than their opponents, ought to give Arsenal a substantial lead to take to Göteborg. The almost certain loss of the captain, Rice, from the defence, should not concern Arsenal because Devine is an able deputy. His task will be to watch Göteborg's most accomplished winger, hisson.

Memories of Real Madrid's 7-3 defeat of Eintracht an the 1960 final at Hampden Park still linger and have probably contributed to the fact that all 67,000 tickets have and nave probably committee to the fact that all 67,000 rickets have been sold. Yet Celtic have won the European Cup more recently (1967) and Lennox, who plays tonight, was a member of that team. The captain was Billy McNelli, now the manager, who considers this to be the higger test. Meanwhile, Cunningham predicts that Real will find it a "very difficult game" because of Celtic's good results in the league. If Real have to play without their captain, Pirti, in defence, they may lose some confidence, Pirti was injured on Saturday.

Göteborg hope to come in from the cold

By John Hennessy

On the face of evidence presented a few weeks ago Arsenai should run away from Göteborg in the third round of the European Cup Winners' Cup today. On the Sarurday after I lunched with Göteborg's charming young manager, Sven-Goran (Svennis) Eriksson, his team played not so much a match as a knockabout against Haimia, another Swedish first division team. With the temperature at minus 10 centigrade and the game in cold storage in Sweden from October to April, a below-size, heated, synthetic pitch was used. I have seen better football than Halmia's played on pintables; they lost 7—1, if it means anything.

While this charade was going in the third round of the European

While this charade was going on. Arsenal were engaged in a man-size FA Cup match, the kind to keep a footballer's mind on business, his muscles on song and his enthusiasm on the boil. Gitteborg have since played a couple of matches in Portugal and another in Beigium on proper pitches in something approaching proper conditions, but it is hard to see that today they can arrive anywhere near match-tight.

The handicaps from which Göteborg suffer piled up as their manager painted in the background. First of all he seemed (or did be only pretend to seem) unable to see any weaknesses in the Arsenal team, which is almost entirely composed of players who have represented their countries at full or lesser levels. By contrast Göteborg can claim only three, four if you stretch a point and include Torstein Olavsson, who played for the Iceland national team. Olavsson is 3 new recruit and his new manager has yet to see him play in a competitive match.

with an appetite for goals. The other two full internationals are Tord Holmgren and Olic Nordin. Holmgren, aged 21, from Lapland, is a hardworking midfield player when he is no appropriate his trade is a hardworking midfield player when he is not pursuing his trade as a plumber, which must be profitable in those temperatures. Nordic, aged 30, the captain, dist the wheels of commerce in a bank when he is not rather similarly engaged on the football field. Against Halmia he was the one man to master the conditions and was an obvious target for any of his colleagues searching for a man to whom to pass.

his colleagues searching for a main to whom to pass.

Mr Eriksson was chosen by Göteborg only a year ago, rather, it seems, to his own surprise; hefore that he was with a third division team. In recent years Göteborg's record is plotted on an ascending graph. They were sixth in the Swedish league in 1977 and third in 1978, and second or Haimstadt last year in Mr. ond to Haimstadt last year in Mr

Erikason's first year of office, when they also won the Swedish Cup. Taking a team into the marble balls of Highbury is a matter of groat personal pride to him.

Göteborg, Mr Eriksson said, play 4-4-2 and "we shan't change, home or away. We always try to win but a draw at Highbury would be very satisfactory for us." They would not put a man on Brady "but we shall always try to press "but we shall always by to press him down".

There was high excitement when Giteborg were drawn against Arsenal, because of the London club's fame and following in Sweden, where English football commands a good audience on live relevision every Saturday afternoon. There was "king-size" interest for the Arsenal visit on March 19 and tickets were selling fast. The futuristic Göteborg stedium, which holds 50,000, will be packed to the ceiling if the Swedes put up anything of a show tonight.

With Hunt looking a little sluggish and confused and Jahan playing explosively sldy squash—especially in the third game—there were to be only two further tests for the big Pathan's temperament. The ball burst ino wonder, the way he had been treating it when he was serving at 4—0 in the third game. In the fourth game, predictably, Hunt drew on all his reserves to light back from 0—6 to 5—6, riding all the punched Jahan threw at him. Jahan began to make a few errors under remorseless pressure, as he had done in the first game. But Hunt had left himself with too much to do—and Jahan remembered, just in time, that this was his night.

The Pathans are gunning for these with particular this. night.

The Pathans are gunning for Hunt with particular fervour this year because he hopes to match the record of their compatriot, Hashim Kahn, by winning the British Open Championship for the seventh time. "I'll be hard to beat in the Open", Hunt said after Monday's defat. "I still give myself a good chance. The after stonday's defat. "I still give myself a good chance. The boys are playing well, which means you bare to play your top squash to win — but that's how it should be."

New Zealanders are left to ponder three missed chances

Auckland, March 4.—Barring a remarkable collapse by either side, the third and final Test between New Zealand and West Indies looks certain to end in a draw. West Indies so into the last day 36 runs ahead with eight second innings wickers left, having been thrown a lifeline roday after New Zealand failed to consulidate the advantage they had built over the first three days.

Zealand failed to constilidate the advantage they had built over the first three days.

New Zealand, 1—0 ahead in the series; lost their last six first lunings wickets for only 66, to gain a lead of 85, and then, needing an early breakthrough, dropped three catches when the touring side batted a second time. The New Zealand innings, which promised so much at the overlinght 239 for feur, was torn apart by Garner, after Roberts hadended Edgar's long, patient innings. The opener had added only one to his overdight 126 not our when he dragged a ball on to his stumps.

Coney and Lees put on 36 for the sixth wicket before Garner went to work, mopping up the last five wickets to record his best Test figures of six for 56. Lees was bowled for 23 and Coney remained undefeated, one short of his 50. Garner gained dure reward for keeping the ball up to the batsmen, a lesson few of the West Indies bowlers have learnt on this tour.

New Zealand's lead of 85 was much smaller than they might lave hoped for, but it could have been decisive if they had held their catches. Greenidge was missed at second slip by Howarth off Hadlee when he had made only six and was dropped a second time in the slips by Coney. Kallicharran was also given a life, the unfortunate Coney dropping a chance in the gully off Cairns. Greenidge and Haynes had cancelled out the first innings deficit when the New Zealanders gained their first success. Haynes falling to Troup for 48 with the score on 86. Rowe was caught at the wicket six runs later but Greenidge, making the most of his good fortune, and Kallicharran averted further disasters. Greenidge ended the day 56 bot out.

Civil Service fight back for third successive victory

By Sydnay Friskin
Civil Service 3

The Civil Service bockey team achieved their third successive victory over the armed forces by beading the Army fairly comfortably at Chiswick yesterday. The score was the same as last week in the match against the Royal Air Force, although the pattern was different, the Civil Service having Even without their Scottish players, the Civil Service had atronger resources yesterday in track and defence and were never in danger of losing once they had stored in the 12th minute. Much of their early scheming was done by Talat, who looked more effec-tive at inside right than at contre bull, in which position he usually plays for Spancer. The best of the Army forwards was Hardwick who with his speed and resource reminded one of an old-fashioned outside left. But the Sible who had come on as a substitute, increased the lead about a minute before the interval from a short corner which Civil Service were somewhat lucky to earn. The Army responded with a sparkling run by Hardwick but although Jenner was permitted a second shot it was blotted out by a Civil Service stick.

In the third minute of the second half, a centre from the left by Mayo, helped along by Gatfield, led to Ellis scoring the third goal for Civil Service to which Hardwick replied within a minute by running in to score from a centre by Bunham. This goal marked the second goal but the final whistle was blown before they could take a short corner.

The position at number eight is more open still, and the selectors must be regretting that the frishman, Michael Glisson, though just starting to play again, has missed the championship through injury. Gibson with his lineout and ballplaying skills promised to be an eventual successor in Lions circles, to Mervyn Davies. However, the selectors have had an unexpected bonus in the emergence of the young Scottish player, John Beattle, whose strength and attileticism in the Cardiff international—provided it be followed by another fine performance in the Calcutta Cup match—may well earn bim a place. Beattle shooting up the ladder from the third division in the Schweppes club championship, has been the most exciting discovery of the Scottish FALL OF WICKETS: 1—75, 2—171, 3—185, 4—186, 8—241, 5—277, 7—299, 8—303, 3—305, 10—306.

Of the more seasoned contenders at number eight, Derek Quinnell, though he has not played for Wales in this championship, still must have useful claims because must have useful claims because of his experience, strength at close quarters and versatility. The presence of proven performers like Utiley and Quinnell would give the selectors on tour a flexibility of choice, but those who choose the side in the first place may have reservations whether loose forwards, now older in the tooth and perhans more liable to injuries. wards, now older in the tooth and perhaps more liable to injuries, retain the pace and resilience necessary for hard pitches and top of the going. Uttley and Quinnell are 30, Neary 31.

There are four locks playing in the championship with outstanding claims for selection, and another, the Scot, Gordon Brown, who might yet just acquire a place. His credentials (three Lions tours) are impeccable but he has played no international rugby for three seasons and it is asking a lot of a man, now 32, to come back in these circumstances for a fourth. It would enhance his chances were the Scottish selectors to choose him for the England game. If they Gloucester's new style has no room do not and if the Lions selectors then eschew the risk, few, I suspect would argue about the choice of the English locks Bill Beaumont and Maurice Colclough, together with their Welsh counterparts, Allan Martin and Geoff Wheel. The position at tighthead prop should present few problems, Graham Price of Wales is widely acknowledged as the master here and on an assumption that the Lions want, above all, to get things right at the scrummage, Philip Blakeway, of England, will go as the number two. Gloncester have dropped two former England internationals—Pener Burler, full back, and Peter Kingston, scrum half—in their side to meet Rosslyn Park in the John Player Cup third round at Kingsholm on Saturday.

Butler, who needs less than 400 points to overtake Sam Doble's world record career best of 3,681, is replaced by lan Wilkins. Kingston cannot displace Steve Baker. Both Butler and Kingston are first choices for Gloncestershive and played in the county finel against Lancashire.

Alan Brinn, a former England lock who is now chairman of the club's selectors, said: "It was a very difficult decision to drop Peter. But we want to play a more fluid type of same and lan, who joined us as fly half, is a much more attacking player. This is not the end of Peter Butler's career with the club. He is a pretty gritty character and I am sure he will fight his way back."

Harleggins expect to be at full increasing if unobrusive effect alternates.

The English hooker, Peter Wheeler, who apart from his recluded skills and all-round performance, is pre-eminent as an accurate thrower-in to the lineout, must be the first choice for his position again. Alan Phillips is enjoying a prosperous first full season for Wales and the selectors might have warm feelings about his dashing and skilful activities in the loose.

At loose-head the selection may be more open than it seemed to be when the champion-ship began. At that time the England prop, Fran Cotton, probably would have been written down as a certain choice, but Graham Price gave him an uncomfortable afternoon in the Welsh game. He has not been committing the opposition on the peel as he used to do, and his all-round contribution has been muted to suggest that he may need to play outstandirely

Another objective in the coming months is to regain the plus handicap he lost recently. As a result of his indifferent form he went from plus one to scratch. But Davies, a company director, who opens his 1980 campaign by defending his title in the Berkhamsted Trophy next Saturday, is quietly confident. "I think what happened last year has done me a lot of good. With a bit of weight back on I am now playing as well has I have ever done, and have had lots of good scores, some in the 60s, round Sunningdale and Wentworth. "I have got a new caddle, and we get on well, and a new set of frons with a stiffer staft have done wonders for my game. I've got a feeling I might win the Berkhamsted Trophy again."

Bisley to stage world event France, Belgium, Holland, Keny,

By Our Rifle Shooting Correspondent

Britain's top markamen have invited the world to come and meet them at Bisley in June in the first world target rifle champion-ship. Tim Webster, charman of the National Rifle Association prothe National Rive Association (No-ject group, has appointed that the event would be sponsored by Whitbread's Royal Kaltenberg Lager with a 63,200 prize list, in-cluding a first prize of £1,000 and a gold medal, for the new cham-nion.

So far, 300 entries have been received for the tournament which will take place between June 30 and 22. The final entry to be limited to 240 will include the best 100 in the Bisley grand aggregate of the last two years. Overseas entries have come from Australia, New Zeeland. Canada. Zambia, United States, Swaziland.

Hooker up for transfer Eritaia under-25 hooker, has been put on the transfer list by Barrow Rugby League Club after his France, Belgium, Holland, Kenya and the West ludies.

The main event of larget rifle shooting since 1860 has been the Owen's Prize, which is laried to Commonwealth competiors. World championships have theer confined to smallbord shooting. The new championship, to be fired with the 7.62mm target rifle will cover ranges of 300 to 1,000 yards, as in the Queen's Prize. The final, at 1,000 yards will be between the 12 top scorers from eliminating rounds.

The final blow came when Davies, one of the eight seeds, was besten four and three in the first round of the English amateur championship.

Davies said: "I lost so much weight in my legs it affected my co-ordination and balance. Now I bave put another stone back on and am a little latter, but then I was always a pretty heavy fellow and I feel all the better for it."

and I feel all the better for it."

Davies, now 32, with four Walker Cup appearances to his credit aims to show that last year was just a temporary blot on his impressive 12-year record, during which he won many honours, was runner up for the amateur championship in 1976 and beaten finalist in the English Amateur Championship in 1971 and 1976.

"My hig aim now is to play well enough this year to force my way into the Walker Cup team at Cypress Point in 1981.", he said.

success since the amalgamation of the University and St Luke's College, have maturity and soundness in their ranks even if their game is slightly less flamboyent. Patching at lock has represented Devoa and English Students and Thornley, a flanker, has played for Notts, Lincs and Derbys and England at 19-group level. Mark Lynch, Exeter's No. 8, is a Welsh schoolboy international and stands 6ft 4jin. (Exeter have seven players of 6ft 2in or more, but the biggest man on the field will be UWIST's lock, Russell Brayshaw, who is 6ft 5jin and weighs over 16st.)

Among their hacks Exeter have two experienced centres in Larkin, who has played for Dovon and Bastern Coundus, and Tickersgill, a Headingley stand-off. Sumner, on the right wing, and Watkins, a Tredejar stand-off, are among eight of the side who also played in the 1979 final. Exeter, who next week leave for a tour of Canada, swept through the south-west group, scoring 167

By Richard Streeton

Those who wept inwardly for student rugby at last December's Oxford and Cambridge match should draw far greater satisfaction from today's UAU championship final at Twickenbam (3.0). It brings together Exeter, who lost to Loughborough in last year's final, and the University of Wales Institute of Science and Tech-final, and the University of Wales Institute of Science and Technology, the 1976 champions. Both Exeter and UWIST have reached Twickenbam by playing an artacking brand of rugby and have scored beavily in the preliminary stages.

UWIST, which is a Cardiff university the ludge search players.

UVIST, which is a Cardiff university, include several players who have already made their mark in higher apheres and will start favourites. A strong pack is led by Gareth Roberts, a Swansea and Weish B flanker, and they should ensure plenty of possession. Huw Davies, of Coventry and England, playe at centre with Martin Gravelle, who earlier this winter scored 31 points in one match for Lisnelli against Penarth, occupying the stand-off position.

Tony Swift, a Swansea and England B player, with 23 tries to his credit in Weish rugby this season, is on the right wing and Justin Robinson, a Newport stand-off,

The five-year-old was pusuited by the heavy ground in the Schweppes Gold Trophy and under the circumstances ran a first-class trial for the Imperial Cup when second to Norton Cavalier in similar conditions at Doncaster. "I am very pleased with Golden Vow", Bob Hartop, his trainer, said yesterday. "The jockey arrangements have yet to be finalized."

yesterday. The bad concerned the great hunter-chaser, Sperian Missile. After a dawn gallop this morning John Thorne was advised by his vet to rest Spartan Missile for at least a month. 'So it's goodbye to the Gold Cup as far as goodbye to the Gold Cup as far as my horse is concerned 'his sporting owner-trainer said, 'and quite obviously it's on the cards that he may have to miss Aintree as well. I'm bitterly disappointed as Spartan Missile is in his prime at the age of eight and the horse has rever been so well in himself.''

Good tidings however came from Kelso where, half an hour after Direct Line had comfortably jurified favouritism in the Morebartle Handicap Burdle, Rubsic administored a decisive beating to Cashea and Tangle's Brother in the King's Own Scottish Borderers Cup. Berlin Festival brings out the best in us first time practically within memory at an international film festival, British cinema was an outstanding presence. The fact is more extraordinary at a moment when this country's film industry looks, for all practical purposes, moriband. Significantly, Significantly, though, apart from Nicholas Roeg's Bad Timing the British films in Berlin were all made outside the conventional industry, with budgets that would hardly pay the personal perks of the executive producer on a standard commercial picture. Showing in various parallel and side sections of the festi-British films that included Derek Jarman's inspired reading of The Tempest (due to open in London in a week or so), Chris Petit's cool and handsome Radio One, and a surprising dark borse, Julian Temple's The Great Rock and Roll Swindle, which establishes its own genre—an amaleam of documentary and Monty Python absordism—to chron-Monty icle the career and social im-plications of The Sex Pistols.

The Great Rock and Rell Swindle complements in a way the official British competition the criteral Brausa competition entry, Rude Boy, which also centres on a punk rock group, The Clash. As with their previous film A Bigger Splash (1974), which was about David Hockney and his circle, the directors David Mingay and last the property of the control of the contro Jack Hazan patiently followed their subjects (often uncon-perative and even hostile) for months and years with their camera, waiting for the sense and essence that emerged from the material they recorded.

Time magazine said that The Clash's "sheets of sound ... have the cumulative effect of a mugging", and that their music was "of restless anger and hangman's wit." Rude Boy shows how this music responds to the feelings and needs of a fierce, muddled, frustrated and aggressive youth (individualized by an occasional member of The Clash entourage, 20year-old Ray Gangel, and relates to the explosive theme of race relations in Britain.

This impressionistic picture of the world of The Clash may be dark and discouraging, but you have to believe it. It would be culpable lack of com-passion not to feel for Ray and the million others for whom the music of The Clash is both a vall of fury and a refuge; and it would be short-sighted to agnore this evidence of Britain's two cultures, embattled and irreconcilable. Rude Boy received a special mention in Berlin for its treatment of a contemporary social issue.

Officially, a Franco-German co-production, Bertrand Tover-nier's Death Watch was made in Britain, with a fresh and foreign eye discovering new beauties and new drama in Glasgow locations. The cust is international: Harvey Keitel and Harry Dean Stanton play American media people exploiting for a television show the apparently dving Romy

Two of the festival's major successes came from Eastern Europe and, conversely, conveyed levels of meaning far deeper than the surface anecdote. Andrzej Wada's The Conductor is in a sense a fable, almost a Polish equiva-lent of Fellini's Orchestra Rehearsal. A great conductor (John Gielgud, no less) returns to Poland after 50 years. He is old, broken, dying, hallucinated by memory; and yet his artistry has still a confidence and ease and power to Budapest, but it merits further mention, since it was awarded the Berlin prize for Best Direction. Again there is a direct, surface anecdote: a man and a woman, hiding from the fascists in 1944, are obliged to pose as man and wife. Their tragedy is that, forced luto a situation of such intimacy they remain isolated, incapable of the trust which might permic them some sort of reassuring mutual feeling. Here the deeper sense is the corrosinu and corruption of personality that is wrought by the circumstances of history, and the implications—for a society as well as individuals-of particular heritage of mistrust which continues to bedevil socialist Europe.

The Eastern block generally showed up quite well. The East German actress Renate Krössner took a prize for her vivid performance as a tactory girl whose rise to pop star brings unforeseen frustrations in Kourad Wolf's gritty Solo Sump. From the Soviet Union Moscow Has No Tune for Tears, for all its soap opera sentiment and poor construc-tion, revealed a very promising and lively new talent in its director Vladimir Menshchov. That film traces the fortunes of n group of youngsters in the Fifties to their sequels in the Seventies; and if the conclusions about time's rewards are glib, the incidental detail of doily life is very lively.

Last year, of course, the Soviet delegation led a socialist-block walk-out from Berlin, over The Deer Humer.

fidgety about the presence of a able tale about the impact of a South African film—until pre-sumably someone explained that Athol Fugard, the writer of Ross Devenish's film Murigolds in August, is something other than the voice of official South Africa. The new South Africa. The new Devenish-Fugard. film . (their previous collaborations have been Bocsman and Lena and The Guest's relates in a sense to the Szabo film; again the message is that oppression and decrivation divides the victims themselves, by the way breeds mutual fear and mistrust.

West Germany took a major prize with Werner Schroeier's new operatic drama, Palermo oder Woljsburg, about the collistens of a young Sicilian worker and German industrial society. Otherwise it seems to be rather a prolific than a distinguished year for Germiny, with no new film from Fass-binder, Herzog or Schloenderif, and an insignificant tract from Alexander Kluge; with Wim Wenders in voluntiations of the control tary exile in the United Stoles; and with no really outstanding work among the 30 or so films on display by directors of the newest generation. France finded only Le-

Vorage on Douce, a teasing commercial film by Michel Deville about two girls (becuti-fully played by Geraidine Chaplin and Dominique Sanda) on the spree and exchanging sexy reminiscences. From Euly, Mario Ferrer's Chiedo Asilo freaks, and to (No Child's Land) was star-tling by not being shocking: is probably different from works like thinly natty. Grande Boulie and

In his report to the Governor, the Election Commissioner con-cluded that, despite some distor-tion of voting as a result of intimidation in certain areas, the overall result would broadly reflect the wishes of the people.

It has been the virtually unau-imous view of the British, Com-monwealth and other international monwealth and other international observers who wimessed the elections, shat they were, in the circumstances, free and fair. The exceptionally high turnout provides an indication of the confidence of the Rhodesian people in the conduct of the elections and the secrety of the vote.

The Government are grateful for the efforts of all those concerned with the organization of the elections for their unstanting work. The need now is for national unity and reconciliation. Mr Carlisie—It is not a political decision. It is a decision taken on the sassessment of the merits of the individual case. Ch. 1969, but they desired formally to maintain their claim in case they might fare better in the House of Lords. For some years computers had

For some years computers had been used for the purposes of the National Health Service. They were aperated by some 2,000 staff employed by the regional and area health authorities. Many were Naigo members. The directors of Health Computing Included persons who had held senior positions within the NHS computer staff. Health Computing's business was to develop, sell and maintain computer systems and other software for use in hospitals and by medical and dental practitioners, and in connexion with medical services. Their plans to do business with the health authorities had met with strong opposition from Naigo with strong opposition from Nalgo officers and members who objected to any trade between them and the health authorines. From affidavits sworn for the defence there was some evidence of documents objection to any participation by private enterprise in the NHS and of political objection to the present of political objection to the present Government's limitation of public expenditure on the service. But the main burden of the affidavits was concern for the jobs of Nalgo members. It was said that the employment of independent contractors such as Health Computing was bound in the long run to restrict the size of the computer staff within the service; even worse, it might deprive staff of the opportunity to do research and worse, it might deprive staff of the opportunity to do research and development work, so making their duffer less interesting, and their employer. In current language, job security, job satisfaction, and career prospects were all felt to be at risk.

Health Computing came to know about the circular through the anonymous delivery of a copy to its office on December 13. On the next day the writ in the action was issued, shortly followed by the notice of motion for an

The first question was whether The first question was whether the distribution of the circolar by the defendants was at common law a tort committed against Health Computing. In his Lordship's judgment it clearly was. Any business done by the company with the health authorides would require some measure of cooperation between those working for the company and those employed by the health authorities. In like circumstances, the circular was plainly calculated to nes. In the circumstances, the circular was phiraly calculated to induce such employees to refuse the decessary cooperation, even though lawfully instructed by their superiors in the health service mogive it.

Was the act complained of pro-tected by section 13 of the Trade Union and Labour Relations Act, 1974, as amended? It was com-mon ground that under that section the acts of the defendants were not actionable in tort if they were done in comemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute as defined by section 29 (1), as a dispute hetween employers and dispute between employers and workers, or between workers and workers connected with one or more of certain specified subjects, paragraphs (a. 10.12) paragraphs (a to (g).

The test of the existence of a trade dispute was objective, nor subjective: Express Newspapers v. McShane ([1980] 2 WLR 89, 97). McShane ([1980] 2 WLR 89, 97). The first point for decision was whether the circular was distributed in contemplation or furtherance of any dispute at all, irrespective of its particular subject matter. Counsel for Health Computing relied strongly on Coxean was Wade ([1909] AC 506) and in particular the words of Lord Loreburn that there had to be a trade dispute, not a mere personal quartel or a grumbling or agitation. Those words could be applicable in the present circumstances provided it was borne in mind that section 29(5) of the 1974 Act by an unresisted act, threat or demand enjoyed statutory protection where it would have led to a trade dispute if resisted.

Counsel said that there had been Counsel said that there had been no dispute, existing or contemplated, but only groundless fears of remotely possible events. The deponents, on behalf of the defendants, had suggested that there were several different disputes, not all of which had convinced the court. On the whole of the evidence, however, his Lordship was of opinion that the circular was distributed in contemplation of disputes between Nalgo or its members on the one hand on one or more health authorities on the other. In the circumstances it was reasonable to foresee that the enforcement of Nalgo's policy of banding Health Compating from the health service might lead to disputes with employers, namely, the recalcirrant health authorities, and, on a fair application of the statutory language the careful was reasonable to the careful was reasonable to dispute with employers, namely, the recalcirrant health authorities, and, on a fair application of the statutory language the careful was disputed to t Counsel said that there had been application of the statutory lan-guage, the circular was distributed in contemplation of such disputes.

truth a dispute between the parties, the company wanting to do business with the health authorities and Nalgo being determined to keep them out. The company were an employer, though not of Nalgo members. Nalgo was a trade union and, accordingly, for the purposes of section 29 there was a dispute between employers and workers: section 29(4) and (6). If that was right, the circular would obviously have been distributed in furtherance of that dispute.

Were the contemplated dispute

the pending dispute with the Health Computing connected with "engagement or non-engagement or termination or suspension of employment . . . of one or more workers" and "allocation of workers and allocation of workers or he dudes of employment as between workers or groups of workers ", section 29 (1)(b) and (c)? As to (b), his Lordship accepted as correct the defendants' contention that the apprehensions were connected with the termina-tion of workers employment and non-engagement of workers. His Lordship considered that a dispute about job security, motivated in whole or in part by the fear of redundancy, was a trade dispute. The present definition required a connexion with a speciquier a connexion with a speci-fied matter (section 25 (1) (3) to (g)), and that connexion had to be a real one, not merely osten-sible: Lord Scarman in NWL Ltd w Woods ([1979] ICR 867, 889). At one time his Lordship was undecided whether the defendants and shown that their fears about had shown that their fears about future redundancies were well founded and there was difficulty in determining the issue on the affidavit evidence alone but, on affidavit evidence alone but, on reflection, it appeared there was no need to resolve ir for present purposes. Whatever might emerge at the trial, the affidavit evidence tended to establish that apprehensions aroused by Health Computing's appearance were sincerely held, and held by people employed in the National Health Service. That being so, the disputes were, in his Lordship's judgment, objectively connected with the termination of workers' employment within the meaning of the 1974 Act. Accordingly, the defendant's argument succeeded under dant's argument succeeded under section 29(1) (b).

The alternative contention under (c) was that the disputes were connected with the allocation of connected with the allocation of certain work as between groups of workers in the National Health Service and Health Computing employees. His Lordship was unable to interpret so widely the expression "allocation of work" in the context of the Act and would agree in that with Lord Justice Orr in General Ariation Services Ltd v TGWU [1975] ICR 276). Services Ltd v TGWU ([1975] ICR 276).

Finally, the court had to decide whether, on the evidence, the defendants had shown such a likelihood of establishing at the trial that what they had done or threatened to do was in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute, as would justify the court in exercising its discretion in favour of refusing the interlocutory injunction sought. His Lordship thought that there was a substantial probability that the defendants would establish the statutory defence at the trial and statutory defence at the trial and there were no special circumstances instifuting the granting of an interlocutory injunction. Consequently the motion would be dismissed.

driver did not sell tickets to anybody. He had a big enough responsibility to drive the bus.

The new clause giving a defence to drivers of football supporters' coaches with alcohol on board was agreed.

Lord Lyell, Lord in Waiting, moved an amendment to specify the drinks containers, such as hottled and cans, which could be used as dangerons missile or offensive weapons, to be banned from designated sporting events by the Bill. He said it would be useful from the outset if a special defination of a controlled comminer was clearly directed towards the bottles and cans to which the Bill was principally concerned. The definition did not include any of the far-fetched items discussed in earlier stages of the Bill.

The amendment was agreed to.

How to shake hands with a legend

The death of Alice Roosevelt Lo worth the other day set me playing the handshake game, for which she was admirable material. I met ber once, a few years ago, in Washington; we sat on a sofa and jointly deplored the lack of real leadership in democratic politics today. Neither of us needed to say that things had been different when she was born, and that her father, described by Walter Lippman as America's "only lovable President", was an example of a breed that had been steadily declining oried that had been steadily decising ever since. Mencken always used to refer to FDR as "Roosevelt Minor", to distinguish him from the Rough Rider, and the world has slowly eaught up with Mencken's view. Mencken's view of FDR, that is: Theodore Roosevelt is still surprisional Rivers have the sense the sense. ingly little known, though a remarkably fine biographs of his early years—up to, that is, the very day he became President—came out last year 1The Rise of Theodore Roosevelt, by Edmund Morris, published here by Collins, £8.501

Theodore Roosevelt provides a good test of homo politicus anywhere; I cannot imagine any circumstances in which, if he were a candidate for any office in an election, I could bring myself to vote for his opponent, no matter what my party preferences might be. The truth is that most of the tests that truth is that most of the tests that divide politicians—left and right hard and soft nice and nasty—are false, and there is only one true division, which is between the first-raters and the rest. Theodore Roose-relt (after whom the teddy-bear is named) was a first-rater, and a first-rater. rater at a time when there were giants on the earth, 100.

But it is the handshoke game I was talking about when I started this. The rules are very simple: I have shaken hands with X who undoubtedly shook hands with Y: Y was the son-in-law of Z, and may therefore be presumed to have shaken hands with him, and Z no less assuredly shook hands with Q . . . and so on. But the point of the game is that you move backwards, not sideways; the object is to see how far back in time you can go, and in how few hops. Of course, the friends of Sir Robert Mayer have to he discussified hops. Of course, the friends of Sir Robert Mayer have to be disqualified from using him as the first hop, because if you have shaken hands with him you will find yourself in the company of Mozart in two shakes, Robert Mayer, have you met Mozart?

Teddy Roosevelt, have you met George Washington?

and outside the walk of Jericho with King Joshua and his trumpeter before much longer. (I sometimes think that Robert acrually true King Joshua's trumpeter: if so, he bas certainly not lost the trick of making the walls come tumbling down in the intervening centuries.

Very well; I shook bands with Alice Roosevelt, she was embraced (embraces count. obviously) by her father, her father shook bands with Grover Cleveland, who certainly shook hands with his predecessor, President Arthur, whereupon we arrive directly at Lincoln, by whom Arthur was appointed to various posts during the Civil War, and from Lincoln we can go by almost any number of routes back to the heginaings of the history of the United States. George Washington and all.

Alternatively, we can vary the geography; I shook hands with Alice Roosevelt, she with her cousin Franklin D, he with Stalin tat Yalta, remember?). Stalin with Lenin Lenin through a number of possible handshakes to Karl Marx (as you will see, the game brings you into the most dubious company as well as the most distinguished. as the most distinguished ..

I can get to Marx mrough several other routes, starting for instance with Hewlett Johnson, or for that matter Angus Wilson, though I bet you won't spot without assistance how he leads there. (He used to work in the British Museum Reading Room, where he must have shaken bands with the Director; well, if you accept a kind of apostnlic succession among BM directors, and allow that Marx must have shaken hands with some of the senior staff of his day under Panizzi's dome, and they with their boss, it's not difficult.)

By now you will see that the game is much easier than it looks at first, because the possibilities analtiply geometrically at a very considerable speed, and the truth is that almost anyone can get almost anywhere-back, indeed, to Adam, or even Robert Maver—in a few minutes' thought. That is why there is no scoring in the game, and the pleasure of it resides solely in the surprises it provides so abundantly; I remember once—though I can no longer recall the route - getting to Henry the Eighth, (No, madam, I do not mean

Henry the Eighth of Bestarahia.)
But that brings me to a far better exercise, and one which demands much greater ingenuity, providing much greater rewards in return; it was said to have been Winston Churchill's favourire after-dinner game. (No, madam, I do not mean oung Winston. It works like this. You choose a civilization, an era, a culture, far removed from ours in time, space of conditions; let us say the England of the first Elizabeth, or Imperial Rome all—we are most of us initiated at (In all sorts of ways, incidentally: it would have been very usful indeed to warn Henri Quatre gainst his assassin; but can you recall instantly without looking it up—remember that you cannot even take boos with you when you go on this jamey—the name of the man who killed him? It wouldn't be much use justo tell him to watch out in general would it? Oh, all right—Ravaillac.)

The feeling of uselesness, however, begins to fade in urn as the game proceeds. We have to abandon the easy routes to power—providing Geoghis Khan with the I-homb, for instance, or better still he opponents—very early on, but they we begin to dredge up from various recesses of our mind all sorts of birt and pieces of knowledge—of history of geography (many ancient civilizations would

Now if you are about to play the game for the livst time, you are about to make the invariable first mistake. "Simple", you declare; "Julius Cao-sar knew nothing of guns or gunpow-der, and would appoint me to any post I demanded in return for such knowledge". No doubt; but can you actually make a serviceable rifle, using nothing but your bore hands and your own learning? Your first feeling, therefore, that the game is easy to win radialy radis away, and is succeeded by a most calutary realization that when it comes to self-sufficiency in the arts of civilization—true self-sufficiency, that is, dependent on nobidy else at all—we are most of us non-starters. (In all sorts of ways, incidentally; it

A few weeks ago it seemed that no such conflict would occur. Lord Todd. President of the Royal Society and leader of the British delegation, and his deputy. Sir leuan Maddock, seemed anxious to keep the discussions to science alone and away from the wider political issues of the Helsinki Agree-ment in 1976 Lord Todd told his Royal Society colleagues that, in his view, private approaches were much more effective than public declara-tions in helping oppressed Soviet scientists and other individuals.

Shortly before the meeting Sir leusn Maddock, asked whether he was going to raise human rights issues, replied: "I don't see any point. It would just poison the atmosphere. There's a very fine Academy of Sciences in Russia. Why don't they do something about it? They've elected to have this system or put up with it for more than 50 years. It's their concern. I don't want to find myself moving into the position of a nuclear war just position of a nuclear war just to defend a few people on issues which I don't understand." He pointed out that, even if the human rights, section of the Helsinki Agreement had failed, it might still he possible for scientists to cooperate and so lessen international tension.

One after another the delegates denounced in plenary session the detention of Yuri Orlov, Andrey Sakharov, Anatoly Sharansky and other Soviet scientists. "Does the Soviet government understand the deep resemment that these things cause?" asked Lord Todd. He mentioned "the urgent need for change" Soviet behaviour, without which true cooperation had little future. Similar speeches were made by French delegate Andro Lwoff, a Nobel Prize laurente. by Dr Philip Handler, president of the United States National Academy of Sciences, and others. Soviet delegate Nikulai Blokhin led the counter attack, pointing out that western criticism was ill-informed, sciencists were not above the law and that Gorkly (where Sakharov is exiled) is a very beautiful city. "He painted such a rasy picture of Gorkiy that some of us thought me might ask to have our next meeting there", says Sir William Haw-thorne, East German delegate Klaus Grote was even more terers, accusing the West of using the conference " ?, an instrument of threat and black-

For a short time short in the world and for that he needs time-scale; of countries and white collaboration. peoples circumstances gave power to the white Rhodesians and it blinded them. The compromises with the inevitable than Britain, bargaining with few cards over the last fifteen years. offered to Mr Ian Smith and his colleagues were rejected. Even when, after the Portuguese revolution reality began to break into the Rhodesian mentality the successive compromises were too little and too late. It was not inevitable that Mr Mugabe should win so decisively at the polls; it was the accumulation of miscalculations and misunderstandings by the majority of the white minority that conspired with circumstances to bring him, his party and his ideology to unchallenge able power in Salisbury.

The all important question now is whether white cooperation, pretty well on the terms that Mr Mugabe has offered with considerable if perhaps calculated generosity, will be forthcoming. There are strong reasons for thinking that the white role in black Zimbabwe could be great and constructive. It can be, if the white population, more particularly its younger genera-tion, can accept great and often upsetting perhaps humiliating —changes in its lifestyle, and set itself new goals. Terrible as the war has been, it has this advantage: soldiers who fought each other can often forgo rancour and work together. A large number of the whites were in the firing line. They can and do respect the "terrs" the same can be true on the ex-guerrilla side-for in war they have gained the self respect and sense of identity for which so many Africans yearn.

Reflections of the people

Further Mr Mugabe can afford to be magnanimous in deed as in word. He takes power with complete authority. Granted that intimidation affected the results, the number of seats Zanu's intimidatory tactics could add were never estimated ar more than four or five; so his majority must be held to reflect the will of the electorate by and large. Force entered into that will as was always realized at Lancaster House the African voter wanted integrate his armed forces and neace, and peace was in Mr find civilian jobs for those who Muzzbe's power to grant or are discharged honourably. withhold. In the perspectives ition must be to make Zimbabwe of African history and geo a powerful black state with a politics it was always an illusion, strong voice in Africa and in the In that sense, the British Government has rather unexpectedly gor what it always said it wanted the basis for a stable Zimbabwe in which the white population could stay and help, as opposed to a white exodus that some other results of the campaign and poll might have generated. It stands to reason that at this critical moment it is sound British policy to help to cement this basis. If Mr Mogabe wants Lord Soames to stay on to provide continuity and a sense of security to the whites, then he certainly should stay as long as, in the office of Governor, he can do so effectively. Independence day is for Mr Mugabe and his colleagues to decide, and in the past Africans have never wanted to postpone it. But the appointment of the senate and the election of a president will take time. In that period Britain should give all the aid it can to the stability of the new state.

The importance of the white settlement in the economy and in the administrative and professional infrastructure of Zimbabwe has been emphasized again and again. Mr Mugaba declares that he accepts the historical and structural facts of the situation The one thing the whites must avoid is to give the impression that even now they expect to establish themselves as back-seat drivers. There will be a transitional period - as there was in Zambia and Kenya for example. But Zimbabwe is going to be a black state, black-led and black-administered, to black (not white) standards. Potentially, Zimbabwe is the second strongest and second richest black African stare; it is their contribution to this objective that is the only real safeguard of the white community's future-a future in which whites must accept a new status and lowered affluence. If they can accept that prospect construc-tively the substitutes that Mr Mugabe will call in from the communist block will be the porters, and that white men's office chairs will be among the spoils to be distributed. He has to find much more land for rural Africans of all tribes, and although he speaks wisely of undercultivated areas it is the fertile latifundia of the whites that the rural masses will expect (and have been indocrinated by Zanu activists to expect) to be shared out in substantial measure. Holding the balance between appearing land hunger and keeping an efficient agriculture will be Mr Mugabe's vital concern. Ir was Bishop Muzorewa's failore-or mability-to make a bigger beginning with such a change that beloed to defeat him so disastrously.

In this scene, long before fears of doctrinaire marxism need be entertained there are features of hope. The whites, however, can give an earnest of their goodwill in defeat by not handling their twenty seats in the assembly as a captions opposition. The Rhodesia Front needs to rethink its policies. It is now no more than the representative of a community, and one which Mr Mugabe wants to integrate with the rest on an equal basis.

Mr Mugabe has started with fair and wise words; his cabinetmaking may reflect them. Zimbabwe is to be "nonaligned", perhaps a Commonwealth member. South Africa is to be treated as a state with rights and sovereignty to be respected. There is to be no doctrinaire socialisation of land or businesses, he has stated-Mr Mugabe knows how much good that has done Angola, Mozam-bique. Ethiopis and many other African "peoples republics". Circumstances must suggest to him that a middle way is best. All this may change for the worse, but that is for the future. For the present he should be given every incentive to carry out his stated policy of recon-ciliation and nation-building.

The end of an era

For Britain, too, a difficult era has ended. For fifteen years and more so-called British imperialism and alleged double-dealing over Rhodesia has embarrassed British diplomacy and wracked Commonwealth and race relations. Whether the outcome, so different from their early predilection, is entirely palatable to the Government, they can take credit for vindicating British integrity. Britain has been as wood as its word in Lusaka 200 in the United Nations. Lord Carrington and Lord Soames have accomplished a diplomatic feat that has often seemed impossible.

VOTING THIS WAY AND THAT

Confidence in the Carter Administration's ability to handle complex international issues is hardly enhanced by the extraordinary announcement that the American vote for a Security Council resolution censuring Israel last Saturday was a mis-take. The White House explanation is that there was a failure of communications within the State Department and that Mr Donald McHenry, the American representative, received instructions to vote for the resolution, when he should have been told to abstain. It is of course true that the negotiations in New York leading up to the vote were particularly complicated, and that it was a long and involved resolution. It is also true that there was some fierce in fighting within the Administration about what the American attitude should be. But even so it is amazing that on such a formal occasion as a Security Council vote, with the ramifications it was bound to have in the Middle East. the American delegation should have got it wrong; and that it should then have taken two days to discover the fact.

The other explanation, even less charitable, is that the instructions to Mr McHenry were not wrong, and that he was supposed to vote for the resolution; but that faced with a barrage of criticisms from Israel, from the Jewish community in the United States, and from Senator Edward Kennedy, Mr Carter decided that he had made a political mistake, which would have to be repaired as well as possible. The resolution was in fact tougher than anything that the United States had voted for before. It did not just criticize Israel for its policy of building new settlements, bur called for their dismantling; and it made a reference to Jerusalem which put it in the same context as the West Bank and the Gaza strip, something that is vehemently resisted by Israel. It was the Jerusalem reference which was the sensitive point, because Mr Carter said that Mr McHenry should have been instructed to abstain unless all references to Jerusalem were deleted. Mr Carter also criticized the call for dismantlement of the settle-ments, saying that this was he did not say that this should have affected the American vote. There does seem to have been neither practical nor proper, but the intention on the part of the Americans to show israel their displeasure over its settlements policy. Mr Carter and other members of the Administration are known to be angry with Mr Begin's Government for its policy of allowing the settlements to go ahead, particularly last month's decision to allow settlement in Hebron, which was the immediate cause of the Security Council debate. The issue in Washington last week was how tough a resolution they were prepared actually to vote in favour of, as opposed to letting go through with an American abstention. Some people were undoubtedly afraid of damaging the prospects of the Egyptian-Israeli negoziations, others of burting Mr Carter's standing with American Jewish roters.

There was clearly a strong case for a stern warning to Israel. The worst of all was to give an impression of political ineptitude or, at best, muddle,

Sex education

From the Chairman of The Responsible Society Sir, The astonishing aspect of the article (February 22) by Mrs Barbara Davis Chairman of the Family Planning Association is that she appears to have no knowledge of the content of her association's sex education and publications for boys and girls, or its attitude to marriage and to parents.

The cruis of the matter is that all the FPA's persuasive publications for adolescents since the early 1970s share the same characteristics. None of them are directed towards preparing the roung for marriage indeed the word is seldom mennoned but towards training young-sters to associate sex, not with love and family life, but with the mechanics of contraceptives. No information is given on contraceptive failure rates which are high in adolescents, the side effects of the pill or abortion, and the hazards of premature sexual intercourse, one of which is the established link with cancer of the cervix. No information is given about the many personal, health and social advantages of restraint from gremature sex, apart from a somewhat derisive reference to chastily in one of their handbooks. The development of a "positive morality" which Mrs Davis says the FPA is trying to evolve might begin from giving the young the truth; without the truth the young have no basis for responsible choice. As for parents, Mrs Davis' com-ments cannot be taken at face value. The FPA and its sister organization, the Brook Advisory Centres, have been the main activists in ensuring that parental duries have been undermined. Both organizations were instrumental in formulating Section G of the natorious 1974 DHSS memorandum which effectively removed parental responsibilities with regard to the provision of contraceptives and abortions to their children under the age of consent As far back as 1972, the FPA's publication Learning to Live with Sex for 13-16 year olds and said to be widely used in schools, recommended places where children could go where no one will tell your parents. In view of all this it is sheer humbug for Mrs. all this it is sheer number to the Davis to say that the FPA supports the view "that parents have a right to know what their children are being taught". In a democratic society, parents should have the right to know when their children are in difficulties too.

Monetarism and hyper-inflation

From Professor F. A. Hayek, FBA

Sir, The newfangled word monetarism means of course no more than the good old name "quantity theory of money", as it was formulated in modern times by the late Professor bying Fisher and reformulated by Professor Milton Friedman Of this I said nearly 50 years ago in the first lecture I delivered in this country that "from a practical point of view, it would he one of the worst things which could befall us if the general public should ever again cease to believe in the elementary propositions of the quantity theory". This was, however, unfortunately brought about by the seductive theories of Lord Keynes. I then said that it was in many respects a crude oversimplification, but the irrefutable is always and everywhere the effect of an excessive supply of money and that it can be cured only by a restriction of its supply. The prob-lem is that in its crude form it provides no adequate measure of what is the supply of money and that not only the supply of all kinds of money but also the demand for them determines its value. This, however, does not after the fact that its value can be controlled and can be adequately restricted only by limiting the basic cash, supplied under the existing system by the central bank. Since this is a government institution, all inflation is made by government and nobody else can do anything about it. It does however, make impracticable the Friedmanite plan of fixing by law the rate at which the quantity of money may and should increase. This would probably pro-duce the greatest financial panic of history.

I trust nobody doubts today that inflation must be stopped. The chief issue is how far this can and ought to be done. On this, I am afraid, my difference from Friedman makes me take an even more radical view than he and most of my friends take. The reason is that the artificial stimulus which inflation gives to business and employment lasts only so long as it accelerates, that is so long as prices turn out to be generally higher than expected. It clearly cannot accelerate indefinitely. But as soon as it ceases to accelerate all the windfalls which kept unprofitable businesses and employments going disappear. Every slow-ing down of inflation must produce temporary conditions of extensive failure and unemployment. No in-flation has yet been terminated without a "stabilization crisis". To believe that it can be slowed down gradually over a period of years accepting a prok misery. No government could stand such a course of prolonged depreswe must do it here and now. It can be done, After World War One the United States brought prices down in six months (August, 1920-Feb-ruary, 1921) by one third! The suffering was great but another six months later a new book was under way! There is no question down, but merely of stopping all further rise. If this is not done by a determined Government like the present it will not be done before. after a vain attempt of concealing inflation by price controls, the pound finally collapses entirely. Yours faithfully, F. A. HAYEK,

From Lord David Cecil, CH Sir. Unlike Mr Stanley Reynolds (February 28), I was moved and delighted by the BBC's production of The Tempest, charged with the play's mysterious magic and intelligently true to the author's intention, especially in Michael Hordern's heartfelt, splendidly spoken Prospero.

But then, for me, Shakespeare is still a living author whose values—moral, spiritual, aesthetic—can still mean as much as they did to his contemporaries; from which it follows that the best performances of his plays are those which take most care to be true to his text and to the intention behind it. In contrast, Mr Reynolds apparently thinks Shakespeare an irretrievably dead author, so far as the meaning of his plays are concerned, whose values no longer signify anything values no longer signify anything to us and whose plays are therefore unbearably boring unless they are presented in such a way as to acquire a new and "modern" significance, even if this involves offending slagrantly against their spirit and even their words.

His references to the character of Prospero indicate that this is what he looks for in a production of The Tempert. At all costs it must avoid being authemic. In fact, performances of Shakespeare's works, like performances of Bach's. are most talling when authentic. Yours truly, DAVID CECIL Red Lion House. Cranborne,

Mysticism

February 29.

From Mrs Lourel Phillipson Sir. Thank you far an interesting article on religious mysticism (February 25). Your correspondent's failure to make any mention of Quakerism was a surprising omission. Perhaps its very lack of monasticism or other exotic trim-mings has caused it to be overlooked in this instance. It has, nwerer, been a strong home-grown movement in Britain for more than 300 years, always mystical in its aims and orientations and practical in outlook. Quakers have never found the need for any director or third party to stand between them-selves and the inner Light.

Sincerely. LAUREL PHILLIPSON. 19 Montrose Gardens, Milngzvie, February 25.

Cuts in the BBC's music services

From Mr Raymond Fischer Sir, The BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra to be disbanded, Radio 3 currailed, but Radio 1 to continue.

Radio 1 should go. It came into existence in order to replace the offshore pirates; but the need, ina free society, to meet the public demand for pop music should not have been paid for out of public funds; to argue otherwise is only apparently democratic, but is in reality superficial and short-sighted.

The BBC have said in the past that far more people listen to Radio 1 than Radio 3. Of course; and more people play bingo, buy tabloid newspapers and watch drivel on the box than listen to Mozart string quinters. This should cause no surprise, nor be considered important, except perhaps to top BBC administrators who apparently know of no criterion other than the counting of heads. They will say that their responsibility is to the entire licence-paying public, not only those with minority tastes. But arts and entertainment bodies receive public funds for the benefit of minority tastes; why is it only the BBC which feels it must cater also for the ephemeral and trasty, with all the mossense about charts noured the nonsense about charts, poured out to the accompaniment of phoney mid-Atlautic accesses? There is surely room on the 24-hour Radio 2 for whatever good popular music is being produced. As for mass-produced pop, there are plenty of other radio stations more than adequate for the task.

After half a century there had to be some modification of Lord Reith's attitudes; but his great basic conception, which led to BBC radio being the envy of the world because of both its studio programning and its support of live music, is being undermined and betrayed by the timid, the trendy, the philistine. The BBC's job is to pro-vide on TV and radio the very best in serious and light enterrainment most to become obsessed with ratings and try to compete in the mass market. Its present financial problems provide the opportunity to get priorities right.

Elitism? And how else did we come by most of the masterpieces, in whatever arr, which delight and surich us today? Yours sincerely. RAYMOND FISCHER, 23 Parke Road, March 2.

From Mr Peter Mexwell Devies Sir, It occurs to me that the unique position in the life of Scottish music held by the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra can hardly be appreciated by those proposing to disband it. I would like to point our two instances of my own experience with them which illustrate the quality of the service they offer and for which, most unfairly, they receive no wide glory or public

Before the first performance of my symphony in 1978, given in London by the Philharmonia 333151612ed under Simon Rattle, the work was "tried out" in late 1977 by the BBCSSO and Mr Rattle, with the egreement of the Philharmonia and the BBC, on condition that the Scottish recording was broadcast efter the Loudon premiere. The work is not easy, to put it mildly, and the rehearsals and recorded performante were of enormous value to noth the conductor and myself and I would make essential last minus changes, particularly in the perceision section, and check the orchestral parts before London rehearsal; and publication of the score on the day of the London performance.

The orthestra was cooperative and cheerful, and their help invaluable, while they knew that any acclaim fir pioneer work on the symptony would inevitably go to the Londor orchestra.

The seruces of this orchestra to Scottish music, particularly to young composers cannot be emphasized enough. The attitude of the EBC SSO—as defined from that of certain other groups it is claimed render from them superfluous—was absented from the propertions of the statement of the superfluous was absented from the superfluous attachments. clarified after my very satisfactory dealings with the management and players for the 1979 St Magnus Festival, Ckney, of which I am a director. The orchestra gave & splendid and popular concert including two works by Stravinsky, and one by Edward McGuire, the young Scotish composer, commis-sioned by the festival, as well as the first performance in Orkney of Mozart's 31th symphony. For this year's festival I thought it would be interesting to invite another Scottish orchestra, but, after a long delay, was given one option of programme of the instant rent-a-festival sort, guaranteed to give no bother to the players, with no possibility of performing, much less commissioning any Scottish music, plus a demand (take it or leave it!) for £2,000 on top of the orthestra's see for an internationally known soldst, whom we did not want. (We are not talking about the Scottisl National Orchestra.) I regretted not having asked the BBCSSO again, but by now it was too late. We have invited the pupils of Chethan's School, Manchester, whose excellent music-making I know from Darlington Summer School, who will present a programme induding new music.

One last point about the preposed execution of the BBCSSO.

Last night was in Edinburgh for a concert of my larger chamber works. A hrge proportion of the players were from the BBCSSO. Were these players not there, and had they not received their thorough trining in twentieth century music essential to their commitment, this concert would have been out of the question. To destroy an orchestra is to destroy the chamber music hat springs up around it. I am not thinking so much of the effect on performances of my own work, but on the performances of work by the large number of young Scottish composers at that Edinburgh concert. This would be a musical deaster, with ripples stretching our to the furthest reaches of Stottish musical life, and bevone.

I do not personally know the BBC Ulster orchestra it is proposed to axe. However, I hear its broadcasts from Belfast often, and would have thought the its cheerful music-making radating from that city, symbolized something which is berond any price in counds and pence. Thee orchestral players deserve some other reward or accolade, rather than the sack.

Borstal girls From Mr Robert Kilrop-Silk, MP jor Ormskirk (Labour)

Sir. Mr D. C. Drew (February 27) rightly points out that Bulwood Hall is the only closed borstal for girls in the country. This means that the Advisory Council on the Penal System's recommendation that this establishment should no longer be used as a girls' borstal could not be implemented immediately, but only achieved over time as and when alternative facilities were provided. I also fully accept Mr Drew's statement that the Senior Probation Officer who is a member of Bulwood Hall's team of first-rate staff is in contact with each traine's probation officer prior to her release. However, in effecting the resettlement of difficult young women, such contact is no substitute for visits by relatives, friends and home probation officers during the trainee's time in custody.

The statistics on which my earlier comments were based are not for one year only, as Mr Drew suggests, one year only, as Mr Drew suggests, but cover a two year period. Of the 228 girls discharged from Bulwood Hall during 1978, 49 per cent had had no visits or only one visit from family or friends during their stay at the borstal, and 30 per cent had received no visit from a probation officer or social worker. The cor-responding percentages for the 186 girls discharged during 1979 were 43 per cent and 29 per cent respectively.

Many of those giving evidence to the House of Commons Expenditure Committee during its recent inquiry into Women in the Penal System argued that women and girls in custody should not be concentrated in a small number of establishments but accommodated in smaller units throughout the country. These units might be attached to or situated near male attablishments so that some facilities and overhead costs can be shared. The representative organizations of prison and borstal governors and chief probation offi-ters were among those who sug-gested that such a policy be considered.

It is clearly a nonsense to expect young women to reimegrate into the community when they have been deprived of proper access to their families, friends and probation officers and I cannot accept that the girls at Bulwood Hall are privileged to be in such beautiful rural surroundings" or that the rural environment is an adequate substitute for regular and sustained contact with the real world to which they will have to return. Yours sincerely ROBERT KILFOY-SILK

Policy for forestry From Mr John Perslow

Sir, Foresters persist in making misleading statements about the effects of their activities on wildlife. The Director of the Royal Forestry Society states (February 22) that conifer plantations "provide habitars for a greater diversity of bird species and also carry greater numbers of birds than the open moorland which they replace

What he does not say is that they frequently replace rare species by common ones: less habitat is available for our internationally important and declining populations of merlin and golden plover, for example, but more for chaffinches, which are already among Britain's commonest birds.

Further, existing conifer forests could be much better for wildlife than they are, given sympathetic treatment; but there is little of this. Instead, the general trend is in the opposite direction-to bigger blocks and shorter rotation. Nor is it correct to lump all

"conservationists" together. The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds is not objecting to all forestry per se. What we seek is an effective coord mechanism which will ensure that important nature conservation sites are not planted unless there is a clear overriding national advantage in doing so.

It is certainly possible for the United Kingdon to accommodate a great expansion of forestry withit requires skilful and integrated planning Why do forestry interests resist this and deliberately seek to mislead the public on the issues? Yours faithfully, IOHN PARSLOW. Director (Conservation).

Boycotting the Olympics From Mr David Maxwell

Sir. At a time waten the western world in general and the British Government in particular are seeking ways of expressing disapproval Russian involvement in Afghanistan, is not the British Government's support of the establishment of a branch of ICI in Moscow announced today (February 28) a slap in the face to those arhietes whom the same government is asking to sacrifice so much more in personal terms by boycoming the Moscow Olympics? A new hallmark

for silver

From Dr Basil Bard Sir, During 1979 the price of silver increased five-fold from £3 to £13 per ounce. In consequence sterling silverware goods, based on a mini mum legal content of 921 per cen-silver under the hallmarking laws have become prohibitively expensive, and the production of silver articles in this country is in danger of extinction and of replacement entirely by silver plate. The hall marking laws, originally designed to protect the consumer, threater prevent him from buying afford able silverware at all. Has not the time now come, therefore, to intro duce for hallmarking purposes new grade of silverware with lower fine silver content? Other European countries have established grades of 80 per cent or 83 per cent as suitable for silver tableware, and as low as 50 per cent for flat articles such as medals Indeed, British coins in the six pence to half-crown range were made in the 50 per cent grade until 1946. Legalization of such grades would do much to restore the via bility of silverware as a modern product. The introduction of sepa product. The introduction of sepa rate hallmarks would ensure continued consumer protection.

One should point out that the hallmarking of gold articles is allowed in four different grades covering a wide range from 22 to 9 carat, and consumer choice in fact dictates that 90 per cent of the gold articles hallmarked in this country are in the lowest grade. 9 carat, which contains only 37; per cent fine gold. Why should not the authorities—ie, the Department of Trade and the Assay Offices—permit the same degree of choice for silver articles? I am, Sir, your obedient servant. BASIL BARD. The Athenaeum. Pall Mall SW1.

Derelict land

From Projessor Michael Chisholm Sir, The present Government has about derelict and unused land in our cities: in the case of Liverpool over 1,000 acres can be so described. While such information, especially regarding ownership, is a necessar, first step. a more fundamental issue remains to be tackled. We must ask the question: why is it worth the while of the owners to leave the land unused? The funds mental reason is that there is no cost attached to holding derelict or unused land.

Within the rating system which we currently have, it would be pos-sible to impute a rate for urbaland on the assumption that the land was in beneficial use, and levy tha rate. To make this workable, the following provisions would be

For land owned by local authorities, the rate should be payable to the Exchequer and not to the incal authority. Exemption to lia bility may be necessary where active steps are being taken to bring the land into use : this could be organized through the procedure granting planning permission. <ube>diect to some control that a local authority could not play havec with the system by granting itself the relevant permission for more than a specified time. Finally, where the owners cannut be traced, provision should be made for the land to come into the ownership of the local authority, after some due process of enquiry and publicity.

The blight of derelict and unused land in our cities is a symptom that the land market is working very imperfectly, and to an extent that cannot possibly be justified by planning requirements. The suggestions which I offer are intended to bring some realism into the market's operation in the context of this specific problem. Yours faithfully.

Dissidents and psychiatry From Mr Brian Wrobel

Sir. You have today (February 21) Sir. You have today (February 21) published a letter from Professor Ralf Dahrendorf and others suggesting that Mr Vyecheslav Bakhmin, a Soviet dissenter, could well be a "next intended victim" of the KGB. They were quite right; he was artested on February 12. The KGB and the procurator's office have a distinguished record in handling the cases of dissenters who seek to publicise the use of psychiatry for political purposes. psychiatry for political purposes. In the case of Alexander Podrabinek in 1978 the investigator violated 10 legal provisions, the chief of the Investigative Department violated three and the productive processing the productive process supervision of the curator, whose supervision of the case was neither proper nor ade-quate violated 31. At the trial stage the Moscow Regional Court which heard the case apparently failed to take into account 34 articles of the Code of Criminal Procedure of the RSFSR and sentenced Mr Podrabinek to five years internal May I express the hope that the present political climate will not obscure one issue which at this stage can be seen in legal terms alone? It is straightforward: if Mr Bakhmin is to be brought to trial then the procedures applied should be in conformity with Soviet law No political posture, whether pro-Soriet or anti-Soviet, bears any relevance to this. Yours faithfully. BRIAN WROBEL 1 Grays Inn Square, WCi.

Moscow, March 4.—Professor Pontecurvo, the naturalized British scientist who came to the Soviet Union secretly four years ago, appeared today before western correspondents. When asked if he had given up his British nationality he produced a Soviet identity card from his pocket and said he became a Soviet citizen in 1952. The scientist said he was living with his family in an apartmenn in Moscow and also had a villa near the city. He declined to say how he had reached Russia. Pontecorvo disappeared while on holiday in Italy in September, 1950, three months before he was due to take up a post as professor of experimental physics at Liverpol. His presente in Russia was revealed on Tuesday when he published an article in the Soviet bress calling on world scientists to fight for a ban on atomic and hydrogen weapons.

Dr Roger Young, chairman of the Broadcasting Council for Scotland, will join his fellow national governors of the BBC for talks in London tomorrow as protest grows at the cuts proposed for BBC services north of the border.

The cuts centre on the disbandment of the BBC Scottish Symphony Orchestra and the hiving off of schools broadcasting.

A campaign to save the SSO has been announced by representatives of Strathclyde Regional Council, the largest local authorogen. Council, the largest local authority in Scotland, Scottish Opera, the Royal Scottish Opera, the Royal Scottish Academy of Music and Drama, Glasgow Univer-sity, the Musicians' Union and the Scottish TUC.

The BBC board of governors has been asked to Galay a final decision annil there have been talks between the corporation and all interested parties. Councillor Charles O'Halloran, convener of Straticiyde Regional Council, complained that the Scottish management of the BBC had taken the easy option in cutting serious the easy option in cutting serious music and educational programmes. music and educational programmes.

Professor Kenneth Leighton, of Edinburgh University music department, said yesterday that the SSO had been for years one of the great contributors to the column of Scotland and Britain.

Last night Dr Young said he deeply regretted the necessity for cuts but added that he was not without hope that the orchestra could be saved. If the strength of feeling being expressed was genuine, the hope must be that enough people could be got together to keep the orchestra in being. But the real substance of the procests had to be tented.

Overshadowed by the loss of an entire symphony orchestra, the cuts in Scottish educational processings have received less public. curs in Scottisti educational pro-grammes have received less publi-city, but the School Broadcasting Council for Scotland yesterday expressed its total opposition to their effects.

A letter from the council to the Director General of the BBC said; it "cannot accept that BBC Scot-land should withdraw pulsarrally from a commitment and a puovision which has been part of the BBC's public service function for more than 50 years and which has earned a worldwide reputation."

The proposal for an immediate, 25 per cent reduction was inacceptable discrimination. The withdrawal of the remaining 75 per cent of all costs in 1981-82, the council said, was a denial of the BBC's Charter obligation.

School broadcasting in Scotland is tailored to the differences in Scotlish education. The annual budget of £300,000 is 2 per tent of spending by BBC Scotland. A total of 83 hours of radio programmes and 22 hours of television is produced a year. Talks have begun with the Scotlish Education Department aimed at transferring the cost of school broadcasting to it. Our Arts Reporter writes:

Measures to help orchestras to gain commercial and industrial support have been urged on the Chancellor of the Exchequer in a letter from the Association of British Orchestras.

Excavations at Wroxeter, Salop, Excavations at Wroketer. Salop, the Roman city of Viroconium. The discoveries were made dur-The discoveries were made during the thirteenth and fourteenth annual seasons of work on the late archaeological levels of the Baths Basilica complex at Wroxeter, directed by Mr Philip Barker of Birmingham University for the Department of the Environment, which owns the site and funds the investigation.

In previous years the post- and late Roman levels that accumulated after the baths were allowed to fall into disuse have been removed over an area of some 2,400 square metres, revealing several phases of timber buildings, and 31 Backson new feels that a several phases of immer buildings, and Mr Barker now feels that a range of AD 300-500 covers the entire sequence from the destruction of the basilica to the abandonment of Wroxeter for some other site. donment of other site.

cincr wall on the east, an enclosed but roofless space.

Mr Barker said: "The extreme eastern end of the basilica seems to have had a special importance from the time that it was, built until after the main body of the nave had gone, when the end was enclosed by a small room."

"This special treatment sur-"This special treatment suggests that there were cult statues or altars here, and the hypothesis is given some colour by our discovery of a number of human skull fragments in the rubble which overlies the rulns of the basilica.

or trophies."

The skulls have been examined by Dr J. L. cricket bats, to prevent them splitting.

A second important discovery in the basilica, in the rubble and mortar platforms supporting the timber buildings of the last phase of occupation, was a series of pearly 40 plaster eyes. Each was carved from a fragment of the wall plaster of the rulned basilica, with varying degrees of skill and with varying degrees of skill and with emphasis on the pupil and tear duct. The backs are rounded so that they can be easily held, and the eyes range in size from 4 to 8cm, apart from one very small example of 1.5cm, which Mr Barker thinks may be a deliberate portrayal of a child's eve. The finds recall a pair of eyes in sheet gold found in the vicinity in 1967, identified as an ex-voto by a sufferer from an eye complaint and with parallels in bronze from Roman Gaul, although none in gold from nearer than the Temple of Artemis at Ephesus in the 6th century BC.

"Our plaster eyes are altogether cruder", Mr Barker said, but the quantity suggests that there may have been a cult centre specializing in eye healing at Wroxeter. Some of the eyes are very crudely carved, and there may have been some merit in making one's own, since nothing would have been some merit in some enterprising individual to start a small plaster eye trade".

Wroxeter remained not only a cult centre, but also the seat of a powerful ruler, who in the late fourth or early fifth century built powerful ruler, who in the late fourth or early fifth century built a group of classically-inspired timber structures on the basilica site. The main structure was a winged and porticoed building 38 winged and porticoed building 38 metres long, with another building to the west on the edge of Watling Street. To the north lay a row of porticoed buildings, with timbers suggesting a height of two or three stories, on a gravelled pedestrian precinct which replaced the cobbled street, and which seems to have been roofed over, like an arcade.

"These buildings are not Saxon or Celtic". Mr Barker said, "but Roman stone architecture translated into timber, perhaps the last classically-inspired buildings in Britain until the age of Inigo Jones a millennium later."

Prime rates rise above 17pc as tighter Fed money policy bites

Washington, March 4 Banks across the United States polar increased their prime lending rate to 171 per cent from 161 per cent. Many banks had only set the 161 per cent rate last Friday.

The American authorities appear to have decided upon a rightening of both fiscal and monetary policies to reduce a record level of inflation.

The increase is the result of the Federal Reserve Board relatining from supplying funds to the markets, indicating a mugher money supply stance.

Meanwhile, President Carter told Congressional leaders that he was determined to trim his budges plan so that the budget would be balanced for the fiscal year that statted in October 1. when he manned in October 1. This amouncement means a cut in planned government spending of at least $15,800m.

The Chase Manhattan Bank was the first to raise its prime rate, but scores of other banks in the Rast swiftly followed. By noon today, banks in the Midwest and on the West coast had set the 17; per cent rate, and bankers were expecting it to climb still higher. An 18 per cent prime rate seems probable before long. Receiver appointed at British Cargo Airlines after rising losses

By Peter Wilson-Smith

British Cargo Airlines has gone into voluntary receivership after a period of rising losses and deteriorating liquidity. Yesterday the group asked National Westminster, its bankers, to appoint a receiver and Stoy Howward, the accountancy firm, has been called in.

The crisis comes just over a year after dealings in BCA's shares—or IAS Cargo Airlines as it was then called began on the Stock Exchange's unlisted securities market under Rule 163 (2) (a).

Technically the shares cannot be suspended, but the Stock Exchange has now stopped receiv-ing applications for dealings in the shares, which stand at 30p.
This compares with a 1979-80 high of 137p and a price of 70p at which a slice of the ordinary shares were placed in January

The company was brought to the unlisted market by Energy Finance and General Trust by an issue of 6 per cent conver-tible redeemable preference shares of £1 at par to raise £1m and a placing of 16.2 per cent of the ordinary shares BCA made profits of £1.32m sold off.

In the six months to September 30 BCA made a pre-tax loss of £805,000 compared with a £535,000 profit and since then losses are believed to have been running at £200,000 a month. £300.000 a month.

BCA attributes its problems to the sharp rise in fuel and other costs, price cutting by competitors and the decline in world trade. Last November the company announced a stringent rationalization programme involving redundancies and aircraft sales. However, the measures have proved inadequate and faced with a cush crisis BCA decided that creditors and shareholders would be best served by orderly rundown of the com-pany's affairs". The directors hope a reconstruction can be effected when assets have been

City apprehensive after Mr Mugabe's victory

By Michael Prest
After a bout of Berves early in the day which sent prices of Southern Rhodesian bonds and companies tumbling the City yesterday meadied itself, taking the view that wholesale nationalization and expropriation by the incoming Mugabe regime was unlikely.

Some companies with major interests in the future Zimbabwe, such as the Standard Chartered Bank, felt that such a clear ourcome to the election was the best guarantee of future

Prices of Rhodesian bonds, on all 12 of which interest has been frozen since the UDI, fell sharply in the morning, but recovered later. The realization that a new government was still committed to prepriations and committed to negotiations on payment terms resulted in a stock shertage in the late afternoon. But the Council of Foreign Bondholders said that no date for talks had been fixed.

British companies with Southern Rhodesian interests also felt the weight of investors' doubts. Lonrho fell 7p to 104p and Turner and Newall lost 6p to close at 125p. British companies are thought to be owed:

National plan possible after rejection of Community-wide scheme

Doubts over scrap-and-build ships

Attempts to breathe new life into flagging plans for establishing a scrap-andbuild scheme to belp Europe's overstarved shipyards and reduce the world's surplus tonnage will be made at a meeting in Brussels later this month.

Brussels later this month.

Leaders of the International Maritime Industries Forum (IMIF) are to discuss the latest developments with Viscount Ettenne Davignon, industry commissioner Plans for a Community-wide scheme have been rejected and the only hope left is for the Commission to approve a series of national scrap-and-build schemes under which two million ronnes of old ships would be scrapped with one million tonnes being built annually over the next three years, helped by subsidies.

One possibility now being canvassed in Whitehall by IMIF leaders is that existing ship finance schemes, particularly the Government's intervention fund, may be used to finance a British scrap-and-build scheme.

The Government has supported the concept provdided that it can be operated cost-effectively. IMIF leaders yesterday reaffirmed their belief that the main attraction of the scheme as an anti-cyclical measure remained, despite the considerable reader and the scheme as an anti-cyclical measure remained, despite the considerable reader and the scheme as a supplier which still able world tonnage surplus which still PETITS.

owners, shipbuilders and oil companies who make up the forum believe that ship-building capacity has to be maintained to meet that expected demand.

Bur prospects of securing an agreement even for national schemes are far from bright. The Community-wide concept was opposed by West Germany and Denmark and, while Viscount Davignon has skown a positive attitude towards the idea, the Commission's competition directorate is much less enamoured. Commission policy on shipbuilding is governed by the fourth directive which calls for a progressive reduction in state aids for shipbuilding. Any attempt to create a scrap-and-build scheme would require a directive of its own. The IMF, however, will argue that in the longer term a scrap-and-build scheme could play an important contributory role towards the elimination or at least harmonization of existing subsidy schemes.

The IMF is planning to undertake a detailed study of the likely demand for shipbuilding throughout this decade and beyond, and is also to examine the extent to which insurance companies and skip places in the study of the last insurance companies. classification societies can help to elimi-nate the numbers of sub-standard ships being operated worldwide.

At its session yesterday, the IMF considered a detailed paper on the prospects for achieving a balance between supply and demand in the large oil tanker sector. Experts reckon that the earliest a balance can be expected is 1983-84, and it is much more likely in 19 85or possibly even later.

both electricians and electrical installation contractors has been agreed in principle within the industry.

A draft parliamentary Bill on the subject is to be discussed in detail by the Blectrical Contractors' Association EECAT, the Electrical, Electronics, Telecommunications and Plumbing Union and other interested bodies including electricity boards.

There is no legal bar at present to anybody setting himself up as an electrician or as self up as an electricism or as a contractor. The registration system would specify minimum technical standards to be regulated by an electrical intaliation industry council. Its role would include keeping the register and accrediting educa-tional establishments.

Unfounded fears of ITV 'ratings war'

From Mr Derek Bloom

Sir, On February 22 you were kind enough to publish a letter from me explaining that the IRA's controls over programme content and scheduling were so comprehensive that it was impossible for a "ratings war" to break out between the Fourth Television Channel and the existing ITV Channel. Hence, I suggested competition in the sale of airtime could not be harmful, especially if those responsible for sales were not represented on the Fourth Channel's management board. Channel's management board.

Mr Nicholas Baker MP replied

that ITV was already engaged in a ratings war with the BBC. This implies either that the controls don't work and that the IBA is engaged in a foolish pretence or that they do or could work but the IBA connives at their evasion. Which does he have in mind?

Sir Brian Young, Director of the IBA, is aiming for a 10 per cent to 15 per cent share of the total television audience watch ing Channel Four on average and 60 per cent for the two commercial channels combined. That seems both realistic and far feems both realists and desirable to me, and certainly far from threatening a ratings war, which would imply a 30 per cent share for the new

I am puzzled by the state-ment "standards will fall as they have in the past". By what criteria does Mr Baker assert that standards have fallen, and compared to when? Is he hark-ing back to the days when ITV had 70 per cent of the audience or to 1953 before ITV existed? Ultimately Mr Baker's "case" amounts to mere assertion, which many will find unconvincing. The same applies to the gentleman who drew on his the gentleman who drew on ms-personal experience of Ameri-can relevision as seen when twiddling the knobs in his horel bedroom. Long-term investments in building societies

From Mr Arthur Long. Sir, I read with alarm the let-ter from Mr Gibert Rowberry published in the business 'ection of The Times of February

Mr Rowberry refers to "very substantial capital bene-fits" that a lender to a building society derives from so lending. Among other things, he states that an investment of £10,000 at 121 per cent, left untouched for 25 years, will accumulate to more than £207,000. But, Sir, an interest rate of 121 per cent will only be the state of the btain so long as inflation is running at its current rate—at least half as high again as 125 per cent. It follows that Mr Rowberry's lender's capital, far from increasing, is decreasing at a rate of say 6 per cent per

It would be most helpful if Mr Rowberry could consult again the building society that advised him, and provide you, for publication, with their estimate of the value of £10,000 in 25 years' time after its worth has been diminished at a steady rate of 6 per cent per steady rate of 6 per cent per annum. If the information cannot be obtained this way, could you, Sir, obtain it from a repu-table source so that your readers may read and learn the long-term value of investment at interest rates far below the current rate of infla-

A full half-point increase in United States E37.1m as against some expectations of any-prime rates, to 174 per cent, did nothing to thing down to £32m. But the disappointing improve sentiment in United Kingdom finantial markets yesterday. Sterling appeared to be well off the bottom in New York late on, but gilts were friendless 75p or so lower on the day and the money market simution remained desperately tight. Unless there is a very radical change in the situation in the next 48 bours, the Bank will have to consider extending its present gilt-edged repurchase

Meanwhile the steadier tone of the dollar bond market in the past few days has not yet filtered through to the Swiss franc markets. Yesterday the latest SF 100m 10-year issue for the World Bank at 52 per cent began rading, and immediately collapsed from an issue price of 99 to 921-as steep a fall as Swiss bankers can ever recall in that usuallysedate market, and the first real new issue floo of the year.

The issue had the bad luck to be caught in the middle of its subscription period by an unexpected discount rate increase. But the real problem is that the big investors have forsaken bonds for the money markets six-month Swiss francs offer around 6 per cent and foreign interest has dried up as a result of the franc's weakness. The market has been plunging without relief for about

Unilever

Profit

With fourth quarter pretax profits slipping 6 per cent to £135.7m, Unilever ended the year on a disappointing note with profits down £4m at £605.1m against market expec-tations that had centred on the £625m level. Compled with the more modest increase in the dividend to 34.3p a share gross for Limited as opposed to MV shareholders, because of the strength of sterling against the guilder, Unilever shares dipped 5p to 438p vesterday.

What seems to have upset calculations was the strength of sterling which probably out the pretax figure by around £34m and bigger than anticipated extraordinary items. In the fourth quarter these smoonted to £11.6m arising largely from rationalization and closures throughout the group As for the underlying trading picture. Unilever is warning that the 22 per cent volume gain in the final quarter after a steady decline earlier in the year to only 1 per cent growth in the third quarter is not indicative of any real buoyancy in 1980 when consumer spending is expected to produce an even dulier trading options than

Still the weakest product area is edible fats where rougher competition in Germany and the United Kingdom led to a material. drop in its contribution while the Nigerian import restrictions were responsible for the sharp fall in associate company profits in the fourth quarter from £5.8m to £3.9m.

Unilever's hand lands have been under pressure all year which combined with higher interest rates pushed up interest charges £26m to £71m, but thanks to the switch to SSAP 15 on deferred tax, which under the equalization agreement with the Dutch end of the group was only possible after last year's Finance Act, the windfall £115m from tax deferred in the 1973-78 period has almost doubled retentions to

In the current year the usual cushioning Unilever enjoys against recession should mean roughly same again profits, where the fully taxed p/s ratio of around 6 and a yield of 7.8 per cent do little justice to the group's record.

Grindlays

Nothing for the speculators

The market was expecting bad figures from Grindlays Holdings but hoping for some news about the unscrambling of the unscrambling of the unscrambling of the group and that of its main subsidiary. Grindlays Bank Lloyds Bank owns 41 per cent of Grindlays Holdings while the American Ciribani owns 49 per cent of Grindlays Bank.

Grindlays Bank expected with profits down by fim at market

news is that nothing is about to happen

about the shareholding imbroglio. Anyway, bad debts are down from £5.8m to £1.6m, essentially due to the end of a contentious Argentinian loan undertaken nine years ago. But this is a once and for all benefit and it will be interesting to see how Grindlays manages to ride the recession this year.

In terms of capital resources compared to deposits, Grindlays still appears vastly over-geared; its shareholders' funds now stand at £150m, just over 4 per cent of deposits compared to around twice that figure for the major clearing banks.

The most interesting aspect of the results ts the absence of any indication about the shareholdings of Lloyds and Citibank. In addition to its shares, Citibank has a major say in the management of Grindlays Bank which is coming up for renewal later this year. Lloyds Bank had arranged the loan. of £26m of subordinated loan stock five years ago and this too is coming up for renewal in December. ..

Because the present arrangement does none of the three parties any good and because of the renewals the market was buzzing with rumours that either Citibank or Lloyds would make a bid. To scotch the rumours Grindlays now says that the loans are being rolled over and that the management arrangements are yet to be discussed.

At the present price of 140p the shares anticipate a not too distant takeover. The yield is barely above 4 per cent and the p/e ratio 5.1, both about double of the ratings accorded to the major clearing banks, and without a bid the shares are overvalued.

Provident Financial

A gamble on 🦈 interest rates

A purchase of Provident Pinancial's shares now is, first, a means of securing a healthy income—at 94p they yield 9.7 per cent; and second, a gamble on a decline in interest rates. Last year's performance-profits fell by 14 per cent to £9,22m pretax - was disappointing, though not as disappointing as the half-time figure (down by 35 per cent) suggested might be the case.

The reasons—relatively singgish growth in demand (turnover rose by 17 per cent to £250m), higher collection costs, and a 70 per cent rise in interest charges—will not be remedied in the short-term; in fact Provident, which negotiated six-months money at a favourable rate last autumn, faces higher interest costs in the immediate future. However, the company has taken steps to counteract the increase by bumping up the rates charged on both its personal loans and vouchers, which between them account for the bulk of the consumer credit business; and consumer resistance appears to be an unknown emotion at this end of

Meanwhile the performance of the peripheral activities is improving : the car insurance under writer. Halifax turned in 2500,000 last year against £250,000 for the preceding 8½ months; Unicredit should go into the black this year; and the estate agency Whitegates is approaching breakeven. So the dividend is not likely to be sopardized this year, even if interest rates stay high. If they fall, the company will be Burmah Oil is busily shaking of the last vestiges of the 197475 crisis. Hence the replacement of an onerous Bank of England guaranteed loan of $100m (although in fact a third of this was repaid in November) by a seven-year £60m unsecured jacility from a syndicate headed by Barclays. This is broken down as to £42m for the term and £18m as a revolving credit, and the terms are as good as any sound company could expect these days—threequarters of a point over Libor rate.

This leaves only one hangover from the This leaves only one hangover from the Tescus in 1974—a £60m Bank of England standby facility of which £19m has so far been drawn down. The activity in arranging this debt feschedding probably explains why the market thought Burmah was going to receive a bid last week, and such dis-appointment may cause further short-term rindlays Bank.

Has America caught the British disease?

New York The United States administration is gearing itself to another economic "package" to try to slow the accelerating inflation rate. It will be the third such package.

The November 1, 1978 programme was followed by Mr Paul Volcker's much heralded tight money measures at the beginning of last October. Yet, just as such packages came and went in the United Kingdom during the 1970s with little or no effect, the question must be raised whether the United States has fallen victim to the positive disease." British disease" of endemic inflation?

Hopes were high last October. Mr Volcker, the new chauman of the Federal Reserve Board, was an experienced professional central banker in contrast to his predecessor, Mr William Miller, Mr Volcker saw the dollar coming under pressure, dashed back from the meeting of the International Monetary Fund in Belgrade and shook the financial world with new springent measures. The discount rate was raised to 12 per cent, reserve requirements were increased sharply and, most important, the Fed amounced that it was going to concentrate on controlling bank reserves, bank credit and money supply as its immediate objec-tive instead of focusing on the tive instead of rocusing on Federal funds rate as a means of regulating money.

The effect on the money markets was fast and dramatic. Short-term interest rates rose two per cent in three weeks, the prime lending rate went from 131 to 151 per cent and long-term bond yield rose by more term bond yield rose by more than one per cent. Above all, these measures frightened the markets and the banks.

In the pest, the Fed had succeeded only in raising interest rates by concentrating on the Fed funds target but had deepe perhips to curb credit done nothing to curb credit availability. Now credit was to be reduced but no one knew by how much, so banks anticithe worst and began cutting back credit.

"crunch" and Mr Volcker was hailed as a saviour who had the courage to take on the battle that the Administration had conspicuously failed to do.

Expectations of a big reces sion became commonplace and the real fear in Federal Reserve circles was that they were raising a serious risk of overdoing monetary tightness. But nothing happened, At that time consumer prices were rising at an annual rate of about 12 per cent. Now the latest prices show increases of more than 18 per cent. Talk of a recession has totality disappeared as consumers and proicers shrug off the effects higher interest rates. The savings ratio has fallen to an all-time low of 3 per cent and the "buy now" syndrome has become as American as apple

Similarly, manufacturers have continued to spend quickly, passing on the costs of higher interest rates to the users of their products. Perhaps the most worrying feature to an oursider, was the speed with which the United States adjusted to a 15 per cent interest rate level as run of the mill and certainly not a crisis.

Within a few weeks after the October 6 announcement, in-terest rates fell. The threemonth Certificate of Deposit rate rose to a peak of 14.5 per cent on November 7 but by mid-January was 13.35 per cent. Similarly, long-term government bond yields rose to 10.50 per cent before fulling; back to 9.80 per cent in early December.

Bank lending, after levelling off in October and November, picked up again in December and banks became aggressive lenders once more. Except for isolated segments of the money agreements of the money isolated segments of the money isolated segments of the money isolated segments. and capital markets (housing especially) ir spon became business as usual—as though October 6 had occurred on October another planet.

pectations of higher government spending in general and defence spending in particular, rising oil prices and accelerations are accelerated. ing consumer prices destroyed any lingering hopes that inflation was under control.

The fact that the money supply (however defined, new or old style) was growing at an annual rate below 5 per cent was regarded by most practi-tioners as irrelevant. For any creditworthy borrower, money was in plentiful supply whether from banks in the United States or from banks operating in the Eurodollar market.

The market perceived there was too much liquidity so the United States had the experience of high nominal interest rates alongside ready availabi-lity of funds.

As inflationary expectations changed, the bond market took it on the chin. Yields on long term (30-year) government securities have risen 3 per cent since December which means that prices have fallen an unprecedented 20 points ($20,000 per $1m of bonds). per $1m of bonds).

30-year government securities are yielding 12.60 per cent, an increase of 3.3 per cent since last October, while short-term rates (3 month CD's) are 15.3 per cent, up 3.5 per cent. Looking track, people ex-perted too much of Mr Volcker.

Time horizons have become so short that monetary policy is expected to work instantly which is a nonsense. But if policy is not seen to be work-ing then behaviour changes. Inflationary expectations worsen and price momentum accelerates. Sad to say, but in these conditions it is difficult to conceive of any policy working. Yet the Federal Reserve can be taken to task fairly in one area. There is no question but that last October the Fed made the markets and the banks suffer but allowed them to recover. In retrospect, credit should have been kept tigher including zero growth or even a cut in the money supply with interest rates raised even higher. The fact is that technological changes in the financial system (interest paid on current accounts, money market funds) mean that the impact of any given degree of tightness seems to be progressively weakened. In the view of at least some analysts, the existence of the vast Eurodollar market complicates monetary policy even

This leads to a second lesson This, leads to a second lesson.

Monetary policy was left to tackle inflation against a background of a budget deficit which was far too large. The deficit for the fiscul year ending September 30, 1980 will be $40,000m and despite the administration's January forecast of a 616.000m deficit for cast of a 616,000m deficit for the fiscal year 1981—already revised to mor ethan $20,000m by Washington — the most realistic private estimates are

Moreover, with 1980 being an election year, no one believed that budgetary policy would be restrictive and there was even talk of tax cuts not long ago. The United States Administration constantly underestimated the inflationary psychology extant in the economy and overestimated the risks of a recession. It is only now scrambling to put together a programme. The other inflation blow has yet to fall. How long will wage increases be kept down to 9 per cent as in for a deficit of over $40,000m

A chance to slow inflation was missed last year and that makes the task more difficult in 1980. The question is whether any policy short of a massive change in inflationary psychology will work. But to change psychology could need a 20 per cent prime lending rate, a major curtailment of credit availability and a similar cut in government expenditure. cut in government expenditure.
Yet what government will take such risks (never mind in

Contenders lining up again for the Channel tunnel

There is no doubt about it, the Channel tunnel is here again after a close season of five

British and French Railways have already thrown their hats into the ring with a proposal for a £650m single-tube railonly tunnel, and more would-be promoters, whether of tunnels, or bridges, or bridge-tunnels combined, are joining them every month.

Mr Norman Fowler, Britain's transport minister, is thought to be mutedly in favour and is expected to make a statement in a fortnight. Mr James Burke, the EEC transport commissioner, also favours it as a micely positive feather in his hat as he leaves the Brussels scene later

As for the public, most people are probably pretty jaundiced by now after previous false starts. Some no doubt wonder what place an expensive circus like the tunnel has in a scheme of things where hospitals are being closed. Others still do not want to open Britain's front door too wide to those damned foreigners.

The ferry companies, notably Mr Keith Wickenden's European Ferries which stands to lose most from the runnel, have been remarkably quiet.

Amid all these imponderables one of the more substantial one of the more substantial events of recent weeks has been the really quite powerful green light given by consultants. Coopers and Lybrand to the EEC for any kind of channel link, but especially the single and twin rail numels.

Hedged about as it is with Hedged about as it is with qualifications about future growth rates in the European economy and the need for further research, their report predicts a real financial rate of return (after inflation that is) return (after inflation that is) of 14 per cent on a single rail tunnel costing £620m (January 1979 prices), 15 per cent on a double tunnel—like the one squashed in 1974—costing £1,280m; 9 per cent on a two-lane dual carriageway bridge costing £2,430m; and 9 per cent on the same road bridge incoron the same road bridge incor-porating a rail link. All these returns are on a

All these returns are on a high annual growth rate (3.5 per cent) and over a full 50-year life. For a low growth rate (2 per cent) to the year 2000 only. Coopers and Lybrand suggest an 11 per cent return on the single-track runnel: 8 per cent on the track tunnel; 8 per cent on the twin-track; -4 per cent on the road bridge; and -2 per cent n the road-rail bridge.
On a full cost-benefit basis—which tries to quantify more fully the benefits from an investment—Coopers and Ly-brand suggest a yield of 16 per cent for both the single and twin rail tunnels assuming low growth, 7 per cent for the road bridge; and 9 per cent for the road-rail link. With high growth the rates would be 18, 19, 11 and 12 per cent respec-

DIRECTORS' INTERIM STATEMENT

Pre-tax profits before extraordinary items for the half-year ended December 31, 1979 amounted to £2,138,000 compared with £1,510,000 for the corresponding period when the business traded as Link House Holdings Limited. Trading profit increased from £1,360,000 to £1,918,000 and investment income from £166,000 to £220,000. Turnover at £10,488,000 was 22 % higher.

The directors are pleased that your Company's first published results since its Stock Exchange listing in October, 1979 show a significant increase in profits. Trading in the third quarter is continuing satisfactorily in spite of adverse conditions in some areas and indications of a somewhat loss buoyant advertising market.

The Board has declared today an interim dividend of 2.5p pershare (4.0p with related tax credit), which will absorb £336,000. The interim dividend will be payable on April 17, 1980 to those shareholders on the register at close of business on March 20, 1980.

Mr. David Lawman reports on 1979

The following is an extract from the Statement by the Chairman, Mr. D. J. T. Lawman, which has been circulated with the Report and Accounts for the year ended 31st December, 1979.

Group sales for the year amounted to £62,250,044, an increase of 4.6%, Group net profit for the year before taxation was lower at £5,860,949 (1978 - £6,849,629). The total amount of profit available for ordinary shareholders was £3,709,623 (1978 - £3,689,981) after taking credit for an extraordinary item (sale of property).

Both sales and profit were affected in 1979 by the national road haulage strike, by industrial action in Lancashire and by the national engineering dispute. In addition, there was a deficit arising from changes in foreign exchange rates amounting to £308,689 compared to a surplus of £129,078 in 1978.

The Board is recommending a final ordinary dividend of 17.5% making a total of 27.5% (1978 - 24.9%)

The Directors of Unilever announce the Companies' provisional results for the fourth quarter and for the year 1979, and their ordinary dividend proposals. The results are subject to completion of the consolidated accounts and audit.

Exchange Rates

As has been our practice throughout the year the results for the fourth quarter and the comparative figures for 1978 have been calculated at comparable rates of exchange being based on £1 = Fl. 3.99 = U.S. $2.03, which were the closing rates for 1978. Profit attributable to ordinary capital for the fourth quarter 1979 has also been recalculated at the closing rates for 1979 being based on £1 = Fl. 4.22 = U.S. $2.22 which will be used for the Annual Accounts 1979.

The results and earnings per share for the full year 1979 have been calculated at the closing rates for 1979. The 1978 figures for the full year are based on the closing rates for 1978. The trends are therefore influenced by the changes in exchange rates during the year. For comparison purposes the trends have also been shown based on comparable rates of exchange.

U.K. Stock Relief

Under the UK Finance (No. 2) Act 1979, enacted during the year stock relief obtained in respect of the years 1973 and 1974 (£38m.) is no longer subject to clawback and the relief received in subsequent years (1975 to 1978 £77m.) will also become permanent-if it is still outstanding at the end of a rolling six year period. We believe that clawback of stock relief for 1975 to 1978 is unlikely. We have therefore released the deferred taxation previously provided for stock relief in 1973 to 1978 (£115m.) as an extraordinary item. Stock relief in respect of 1979, which is not expected to be subject to clawback, reduces the fourth quarter and year's tax charge by £20m.

Fourth Quarter 1979

In this quarter total sales value was 13% higher than in the corresponding quarter of 1978, of which 21% arose from higher volume. In Europe total operating profit was lower than in 1978. Improvements in Sundry Foods and Drinks, Chemicals and Transport were more than offset by lower results in other groups, notably Edible Fats. Results in the United States in total showed an improvement ·UAC International's profits were still below those of 1978 but there are

Costs of reorganisations, mainly in the United Kingdom, are included in signs of a slow recovery. non-recurring items. Higher interest rates and a reduction in net liquid funds led to an increase in interest charges. Taxation was unusually low because of United Kingdom stock relief in respect of the whole year.

For the year as a whole, total sales value rose by 12% at comparable rates of exchange: the volume rise was some 32%.

In Europe total operating profit remained at about last year's level as better results in some product groups, notably Frozen Products, Sundry Foods and Drinks, Detergents, Chemicals and Transport, were offset by lower profits of the Edible Fats business and by lower export earnings from the United Kingdom.

In the United States profits were much higher than in 1978, mainly because National Starch has now been included for the full year. Lipton had a good year but Lever Brothers is still operating at a loss. The other overseas countries on the whole performed satisfactorily but results were affected by adverse exchange rate movements. UAC International however had a disappointing year, with results below those of 1978 due to difficult trading conditions. This is reflected in the lower

The strengthening of sterling reduced results expressed in this currency calculated at closing

The Boards today resolved to recommend to the Annual General Meetings to be held on 14th May, 1980, the declaration of final dividends in respect of 1979 on the Ordinary capitals at the following rates, which are equivalent in value at today's rate of exchange in terms of the Equalisation Agreement between the two companies:

15.11p per original 25p Ordinary share (1978:14.00p), bringing the total of LIMITED's dividend declarations for 1979 to 24.05p per share (1978: 22.67p).

Fi. 6.32 per Fl. 20 Ordinary capital (1978 : Fl. 5.40), bringing the total of N.V.'s dividend for 1979 to Fl. 9.88 per Fl. 20 Ordinary capital

Together with the interim dividend declared in November 1979, the proposed final dividend will result in a total dividend for LIMITED for 1979 which is approximately 6% more than LIMITED's total dividend for 1978. The strengthening of sterling against the guilder in the context of the Equalisation Agreement is the cause of the greater percentage increase in N.V.'s total dividend.

The LIMITED final dividend will be paid on 27th May, 1980, to shareholders registered on 29th April, 1980.

The N.V. final dividend will be paid on 27th May.

Shareholders are reminded that for the purpose of equalising dividends under the Equalisation Agreement, ACT in respect of any dividend paid by LIMITED has to be treated as part of the dividend. If the effective rate of ACT applicable to payment of the final dividend is changed from the current rate of 3/7ths, the amount now announced will be adjusted accordingly and a further announcement made. LIMITED's total dividend declaration for 1978 of 22.67p is 0.75p higher than the previously published figure due to the reduction in the rate of ACT from 33/67ths to 3/7ths. The Report and Accounts for 1979 will be published on 24th April, 1980.

4th March, 1980.

Companies Bill clause watered down

By Our Financial Staff
A late clause in the Com-panies Bill which demanded company secretaries that company secretaries should hold appropriate qualifications has now been significantly watered down by an amendment tabled this week. As a result of the amendment tabled by Sir Graham Page, Conservative MP for Crosby on Merserside, who introduced the original clause, the onus will be an company directors to ensure that their company secretaries are capable of doing the job.

secretaries are capable or doing the job.

Originally, Sir Graham's clause called for new company secretaries to be members of the Institute of Chartered Secretaries or any of the Institutes of Chartered Accountants or to be complified harristers, solicit. be qualified barristers, solicitors or advocates.

The marrowness of this demand caused some controversy among other professional and accountancy bodies who felt qualification necessitated by their membership require-ments was quite sufficient. The move also caused some controversy among the 2,000plus company secretaries of quoted concerns who boast no professional qualification and who, although themselves pro-tected under the terms of the clause, saw the move as possi-bly the time end of the wedge. bly the thin end of the wedge.

Rowever, in an amendment, which successfully negotiated the report stage of the Bill in the Commons, Sir Graham has introduced a compromise, which simply calls on directors to take "all reasonable steps" to see that the company secretary is a person "who appears to them to have the requisite knowledge and experience".

Element Bron and friends face to face with a Thing in to-night pite, about UFOs Friends in Space (ITV, 9.00)

The admonitory adage about the cobbler and his last applies, The admonitory adage about the cobbler and his last applies, almost without exception, to those comedians who will insist in rounding off their act with a song. But is it, also, not enough for a magician to excel in deception without dabbling in comedy as well? David saw Paul Daniels a week or so ago, I would have said yes. He jokes his way through his act. Nothing new in that, you might think; it is, in any case, a legitimate way to divert our attention from the mechanics of the trick. But Mr Daniels's jakes are usually good and he delivers them with the assurance and expert things of the accomplished comedian. He could easily make a living as a comic but he is an illusionist, first and foremost, and an excellent one. Another of his weekly shows is on BBC 2 at 6.00 rounght.

Tam not sure that I am going to like Potter (BBC 1, 8.30).
Cartainly I admire the skill with which Arthur Lowe plays the meddler in other people's alfairs, but I dislike both Potter's insulting behaviour to his wife and the vicar's cavalier attitude towards his spouse. For this reason, I felt uncomfortable watching last week's episode—the first I had seen—and I am surprised at the thundering silence from Disgusted, Tunbridge Wells. I will watch tonight's story because it features the aways dependable Harry H. Corbett as a retired gangster seeking a recancillation with his wife, and because I want to find out if I am doing Potter an injustice by censuring him too hard too soon.

O The Profession of Intelligence (Radio 4, 7.45) sounds like one of these worthy, dry and terebral items that live happily on Radio 3. It is anything but. The intelligence is the espionage variety and, in the first of two programmes about the British secret service, we hear how "C" lost his leg and how Captain Payne Best feeled the Hun with knitting patterns, pigeons and balloons. In Scientifically Speaking (Radio 3, 9.30), the theory is advanced that it was a meteorite, thudding into the Earth, that gaf rid of all our dinosaurs. That alone should make this discussion programme worth listening to. Evenly matched so far as interview skills are concerned are Sir Keith Joseph and Mary Goldsmith, his interrogator in tonight's edition of Analysis (Radio 4, 8.45).

No wonder tonight's Arena film (BBC 2, 8.10) had to be shot excretly. Octanishly a report on how a new and vital form of the arrival life is being forged in the ghettes of South Africa's chanty towns and settlements, it is, more fundamentally, a document shout featless men and women who won't allow the chains that hind their feet also to fetter their minds.
